Alberta may peg oil at world price

VANCOUVER (CP) — If the federal and Alberta governments are unable to reach a new oil price agreement this winter, Alberta will set its own price for in-province consumption, Premier Peter Lougheed says.

He said Monday that if other provinces wanted oil at that price, they could buy it or go elsewhere.

"Within Alberta, people will pay the world price for oil fairly soon, and if other Canadians want to pay the price, they can have some, too," he said following an address to the Vancouver Board of Trade.

Lougheed said he doubted the federal government would move before Alberta and use its discretionary powers to set the price of oil for sale outside the province.

He said at a time when Ottawa was trying to soldify the federalist forces in Quebec by promising not to touch Quebec Hydro or other natural resources, it was not likely to encroach on another province's jurisdiction over resources.

"I wouldn't go so far as to say it (a unilateral decision by Ottawa) would lead to a breakup of Confederation, but it would create some stresses and strains," he said.

There was always the chance that Ottawa would challenge Alberta's unilateral decision to set its oil prices, he said, but that would be unreasonable interference in a province's power to decide when and how it wanted to develop its resources for sale.

The provinces own their resources and can determine when they develop them, but they need federal permission to market them outside provincial boundaries.

At this winter's price negotiations, Alberta will continue to press its position that domestic oil should be raised to world prices.

Canadian oil sells domestically for $13.75 a barrel, while the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said in June its ceiling for a barrel would be $29.37.

Alberta is willing to make concessions, Lougheed said, such as phasing in the in-

Oil threat 'grandstanding'

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed is "grandstanding" in threatening that his province will set its own oil prices, says Opposition Leader Bob Clark.

New Democratic Leader Grant Notley said the statement meant Alberta was "headed for a major confrontation" with a federal government that would have all the other provinces on its side.

Pricing oil at world levels would destroy economic diversification in Alberta and be "catastrophic for Alberta farmers and for the Canadian economy as a whole."

Clark said he doubted the seriousness of Lougheed's intention to raise prices that high, but said he did not think Albertans should have to pay the world price for oil, adding, "It's our resource. We own it."

Can't hack it any longer

Days of summer have given way to days of turning leaves and disappearing tourists. If hack driver Dan Feehan finds lack of business disturbing, his 17-year-old horse Danny Boy doesn't seem to miss endless trots around park. Tomorrow is their last day on city streets for season. Danny Boy goes to Salt Spring Island for winter, and Feehan, an unemployed teacher, goes to Edmonton.

Embassy stays in Tel Aviv until peace pact—Clark

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative government has dropped its proposal to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv.

"We do not intend to move the embassy to Jerusalem," Prime Minister Clark told the Commons on Monday.

In reversing one of the most controversial decisions he had taken since becoming prime minister after the May 22 federal election, he said that when there was a just and lasting peace in the Middle East, his government might re-open the question.

Clark was following up the recommendation of Robert Stanfield, former Conservative party leader, who toured the Middle East studying reaction to the government's intent.

Arab countries had objected vehemently, and Canadian officials have admitted considerable loss of business. The Israeli government supported the move.

Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau said Clark had blundered and cost Canada both business and credibility.

He added that one Arab told him that Stanfield had said during his Middle East tour: "Don't worry. We will change the policy, but also we will change the prime minister pretty soon."

Stanfield later described Trudeau's remarks as mischievous.

"You don't believe I'd say that, do you?" he asked reporters. "There's just no truth to it."

Answering questions at a news conference, the former Conservative leader said he decided to make his recommendation now because it became very clear during his travels in the Middle East that moving the embassy could jeopardize peace efforts.

Stanfield stressed that his recommendation was based primarily on peace considerations rather than commercial interests.

Canada had important economic interests in the Middle East, but the most important interest was peace, he said.

"It's on this basis I made my recommendation."

Egyptian ambassador Hassan Fahmy said he was "happy and satisfied with this decision of the Canadian government."

Abdullah Abdullah, head of the Palestine section of the Arab Information Centre here, said it was a courageous decision, but Canada should go further and recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization and Palestine Liberation rights.

Trudeau also said that Stanfield had given de facto Canadian recognition to the Palestine Liberation Organization by talking to its representatives while in the Middle East.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, said the Conservatives were irresponsible in proposing the embassy move in the May 22 election campaign and irresponsible in announcing implementation of the move after the election.

And Immigration Minister Ron Atkey, the man given most of the responsibilty for Clark deciding to move the embassy, said he was in favor of any move designed to help peace in the Middle East. He said he hoped the Jewish community would

Decision applauded by Arabs, not Israel

OTTAWA (CP) — The Israeli embassy said Monday that Prime Minister Clark's latest move on the Jerusalem embassy issue would not help bring peace in the Middle East.

But Egyptian Ambassador Hassan Fahmy said he was "happy and satisfied" with Clark's decision not to move the embassy.

Israeli Ambassador Yeshayahu Anug said Clark's announcement "causes disappointment."

Linking the embassy move "with the ultimate outcome of the peace process isn't helpful to the peace process itself," Anug said.

It would not help peace "since it may be interpreted as acceptance of the obstructionist and negative view of the Arab rejectionist states regarding that process," he said.

The rejectionist states are the Arab states who have denounced Israeli-Egyptian peace talks.

"Peacemaking needs continuous support, and those who oppose it deserve no reward," the ambassador said.

"Jerusalem will remain the capital of Israel and the united city of peace in which religions and peoples live together," he added.

Fahmy said he was glad Clark dropped the Jerusalem move quickly, because if the problem had festered "the situation would have been more difficult to solve."

Abdullah said Clark's move had "removed the scar in Canadian-Arab relations" caused by Clark's original embassy plan.

Roads run bloody in San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — A leftist march exploded into a bloody gunbattle with police Monday that left dozens dead and wounded in streets resembling a battlefield. The moderate ruling junta cordoned off the heart of the capital with armored vehicles, but a wave of looting broke out after the five-hour battle.

Reporters trapped inside the area said leftists, most of them armed with pistols, attacked the National Palace and the mayor's office, burned several cars and set up barricades with garbage cans. Police fired back with machine guns from armored vehicles.

Officials at Rosales Hospital said its ambulance crews picked up or saw the bodies of at least 37 people killed and that it was treating 35 wounded. Unconfirmed reports said as many as 100 were wounded.

A wave of looting broke out after the battle ended at nightfall, with persons believed to be common criminals breaking windows and knocking down doors along a five-block row of shops around the central July 14 plaza, witnesses said.

The Popular Revolutionary Bloc announced it would free most of the 250 hostages it took Wednesday at the labor and economy ministries on Monday evening, but would keep three cabinet members as well as the buildings.

Witnesses said the fire-fight was triggered by 300 young members of the leftist Feb. 28 Popular Leagues who opened fire on policemen during a march. Earlier, authorities had identified them as members of the Bloc.

Win the Island win off until next week

There won't be any winner of game four of the Colonist name the mountains and Win The Island contest, published Sunday.

An error in the entry form —omission of a seventh circle in the Mystery Island portion of the quiz—unfortunately nullified the chance of anyone winning.

So game four, with apologies to confused contestants, will be cancelled and the contest extended another week with a new puzzle in next Sunday's edition of the paper.

Resources bulge surplus

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist business editor

VANCOUVER — B.C.'s forests, its oil and natural gas and its stature as a vacation destination have come through once more.

Figures disclosed here Monday by the province's finance minister showed that natural resources and tourism were major reasons why B.C. continues to show a healthy budgetary surplus, quarter after quarter.

Strong consumer spending and difficulties with the science of budget forecasting also contributed to the $188.6-million surplus shown by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe. The latest figures are for the six-month period from April 1 to Sept. 30.

Revenue for the period in question was $2.49 billion, $217.4 million more than was predicted. Expenditure was $2.3 billion, $54.9 million more than expected.

Wolfe, in making his first quarterly report outside the Legislative Buildings, said he expected to see the surplus whittled somewhat when the nine-months mark was passed, but he quickly added that the government was now fully confident that a balanced budget was assured for the full fiscal year.

The Sept. 30 surplus was $162.5 million more than forecast and $74.2 million more than the surplus at the same time in 1978. Wolfe said the continuing strong housing starts figure in the U.S., which absorbs the majority of B.C.'s lumber exports, was just one reason why his estimates were so far out.

"U.S. housing starts are holding at a remarkable level, especially considering the anticipated recession there. This is at a level that was impossible to anticipate," Wolfe said.

Other things contributed strongly to the performance of the forestry sector, the minister said. Constant employment throughout the industry without serious disruption through walkouts or strikes, the value of the Canadian dollar vis-a-vis the U.S. dollar (export sales are in that coin) and strong prices and increased deliveries of pulp, paper and lumber, could all share the credit, he said.

Timber sales, logging tax and other forest fees totalled $210 million, which was more than a 100-per-cent jump over last year's six-month

Heritage fund? No plans here

VANCOUVER (Staff)— This province has no plans to create a B.C. Heritage Fund like the headline-grabber in neighboring Alberta.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said in an interview here Monday that the concept had been "looked at," but nothing was being done to create such a fund. Alberta has amassed some $5 billion in oil and gas revenues and is setting it aside for the time when its vast petroleum resources dwindle.

In response to a reporter who asked him to justify the fact of repeating surpluses, Wolfe shot back:

"No we don't apologize for surpluses in British Columbia. For four years we've been functioning on a balanced-budget policy, not to be following that religiously, but to tread with care in terms of estimates.

"You should bear in mind that any surpluses we've recorded in prior years have been appropriated to stimulate employment, extending highways and increasing the homeowner grant. This (money) is not hidden away in some vault."

Sexes may share Oak Bay council

When voters in Oak Bay municipality go to the polls Nov. 17, they may well end up electing Canada's first council evenly split between the sexes.

There is a good possibility that three of the six aldermanic seats on council will be held by women after the vote, although the mayor's chair will, for this term, be a male preserve.

Three women are among the four candidates for the two one-year seats on council, and incumbent Ald. Isabel Craig is expected to be re-elected on her record. The other woman alderman in Oak Bay, Shirley Dowell, is not facing election this year.

In addition to the five vacant aldermanic seats, Oak Bay's 12,400 voters will have to choose a new mayor to replace poll-topping Brian Smith, who has moved to the provincial scene.

● Full list of nominations, Page 42, 43.

The two-way race for mayor pits former alderman John Goult against veteran alderman Doug Watts for the top job.

Goult, an Oak Bay lawyer, retired undefeated last year after four two-year terms. Watts, a senior engineer with the provincial water resources branch, has been on council continuously since the late 1950s, except for one term when he unsuccessfully ran for reeve.

Watts' run for the mayoralty, combined with the resignation of Ald. Norman Pimlott two months ago, left two one-year terms open.

Seeking the job are former school board chairman Susan Brice, Margaret Marston, homemaker and longtime council watchdog as a delegate of the League of Women Voters, Mabelle Murphy, co-ordinator of the Oak Bay senior citizens' centre, and chartered accountant Walter Holms.

Three incumbent aldermen—contractor and former school trustee Peter Bunn, political science professor Neil Swainson and homemaker Isabel Craig—are all seeking re-election to two-year terms.

They will be opposed by three others: Walter Dodsworth, former manager of the Butchart Gardens, who served on council from 1961 to 1969, when he was defeated in a mayoralty bid by Frances Elford; travel agent Henry William Smith, and retired businessman Jack Rhodes.

Church fires Carter's pastor over woman

NAMES in the NEWS

President Carter's pastor, Charles Trentham, has been fired by the congregation of the First Baptist Church for dating a woman who was separated—but not divorced—from her husband, church officials said in Washington on Monday. Officials said the congregation voted 166-140 Sunday to accept the recommendation of the deacons that Trentham's contract not be renewed.

Singer Joan Baez asked the world's three superpowers Monday to cast aside ideology and act "like grown-ups" in an international effort to save the lives of starving refugees in Cambodia. Ms. Baez, in a Washington news conference, called on President Carter and the leaders of the Soviet Union and China to join in a "united front" to get much-needed food and medical supplies to the Cambodian people.

Any recording artist would be happy to land on Billboard magazine's charts at 159 out of 200 albums ranked. He'd be especially happy to be listed "with a bullet"—industry jargon that says it's a hot-selling record, showing signs of rapid upward movement. So who's the latest happy artist that has all that going for him? Pope John Paul II, that's who—with his Pope John Paul II Sings at the Festival of Sacrosong, on the Infinity label.

Michael Douglas, whose career took off with China Syndrome and went right on running with Running, which opens nationwide Friday, has a brand new project in the works. He said on the Stanley Seigel Show that he'll be costarring in January or February in New York with Jill Clayburgh in an as yet untitled film.

Johnny Weismuller is on the comeback trail, and after a series of strokes that left him in a coma for 30 days, it's a long one. The man who immortalized Tarzan in countless films is recuperating in Acapulco, Mexico, and wife Maria denies reports quoting him as saying he went to the resort area to die. Says she, "he did not come to Acapulco to die. He came to live." She adds the 75-year-old former Olympian has even started swimming again.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, the first French head of state to visit divided Berlin, pledged Monday France's deep commitment to the city. Speaking in German before a parade of some of the 2,700 French troops stationed in West Berlin, Giscard said: "Berlin is and remains the bastion of freedom. We are actively striving towards detente in Europe."

Raul Castro, brother of Cuban leader Fidel Castro, says the mock landing by U.S. Marines at Guantanamo Bay provided fresh evidence of American scorn for the sovereignty of other countries. Castro, Cuba's defence minister, made the remarks Sunday on the 20th anniversary of the death of Camilo Cienfuegos, a leader of the Cuban revolution. The broadcast was monitored in Miami.

creases to the world level and keeping the price slightly below the Chicago Composite Index to give Canadian oil an advantage over United States oil.

The Chicago Composite Index combines U.S. wellhead and imported oil prices to produce the average U.S. oil price.

Alberta will also be asking the federal government to take action to ensure Canada is energy self-sufficient by 1990. This can be achieved, Lougheed said, by moving to world prices for oil, accelerating construction of oil sands plants in Alberta and increasing tax incentives for oil and gas producers.

Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick will have to substitute natural gas for oil in the next decade he said, while Newfoundland and Nova Scotia must be encouraged to expand their off-shore oil and gas exploration.

The premier said Alberta will make no apologies for its demands. Ontario's cries that a move to world oil prices will cause unemployment and inflation in Eastern Canada were ridiculous.

"They have had, since 1973, the lowest costs of any industrial area for energy, and I haven't seen them taking advantage of it," he said.

In Ottawa, Liberal finance critic Herb Gray accused Lougheed of being narrow-minded and said if the premier was serious, he was "doing a disservice to the cause of confederation."

"It's shocking to hear a premier supposedly in favor of Canada staying together talking like this," he said in an interview.

Gas could chop deficit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Increased natural gas exports from Alberta and British Columbia could cut the country's balance of payments deficit by $2 billion and reduce the need to raise interest rates, Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed said Monday.

Lougheed said there could be a dramatic increase in sales of gas to the U.S., if the federal government would allow it. Proposals for exports now before the National Energy Board would raise $2 billion a year, he said.

The deficit, which is reaching record proportions, has been a major factor in depressing the value of the Canadian dollar. The balance of payments counts exports and imports of goods and services such as interest payments on loans and dividends paid to foreigners.

Canada must be fair—Stanfield understand the position of the government.

Challenged by Broadbent and Trudeau in the Commons to state firmly whether the embassy would be moved, Clark said, "We do not intend to move the embassy to Jerusalem."

His formal statement to the House said the government accepted the Stanfield "recommendation that no action be taken on the location of the Canadian embassy until the status of Jerusalem is clarified within a comprehensive agreement between Israel and Arab leaders."

In his report, Stanfield said Canada had to retain credibility with Arab countries and Israel by being fair-minded.

"We could not do this if we were to move our embassy to Jerusalem," he said.

But Stanfield said his recommendation did not necessarily foreclose indefinitely a move of the embassy to Jerusalem.

"It is my view, however, that the question of the relocation of the embassy must await the resolution of Jerusalem's status as part of a just and lasting comprehensive peace settlement.

"Once this is achieved, the embassy question could be reviewed in light of the provisions made in such a settlement."

Asked what damage Clark's promise had done in the Middle East, Stanfield responded, "I don't believe any on-going damage has been done either vis-a-vis Israel or the Arab countries."

Stanfield added that he hoped the type of re-examination process his mission represented would improve relations with both sides.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent said Clark's promise to move the embassy was irresponsible.

In Washington, spokesmen for the state department and the National Security Council were reluctant to comment on Clark's announcement, saying the location of a Canadian embassy in a foreign country, was a matter for Canadians to decide.

The state department spokesman noted, however, that the U.S. embassy in Israel was in Tel Aviv.

total, the B.C. figures show.

Unanticipated revenues from strong sales, fees and rentals of oil and gas leases, plus increases in other mineral taxes, all added up to a $314-million total in that sector, up more than 50 per cent from the 1978 figures.

Two increases in export prices of natural gas, and thus increased revenue for the B.C. Petroleum Corp., saw its performance also increase by about 50 per cent.

Tourism, shaking off anticipated trouble in gasoline supplies for would-be visitors from the U.S., showed a 22.9-per-cent increase in revenues from the hotel and motel room tax, Wolfe said. However, this was only part of the story, since dollars visitors spent were quickly recirculated through the economy.

The social services tax, reduced last year from five to four per cent, returned an increase of 18.7 per cent, after figures were adjusted to account for the new rate. However, in actual dollar terms, this figure fell from $331 million to $305.4 million.

But it wasn't all good news. There were budgetary overruns of $54.9 million in some ministries.

Health costs shot up by about 18 per cent to $603.5 million, (a $44.4-million over-forecast, primarily as a result of increased payments to the Medical Services Commission, hospital programs and long-term care); an expanded highway construction plan ate up almost $40 million more than anticipated, and a serious forests fire summer added up to an extra $10.4 million.

The increased revenue also covered six-month losses reported by three crown corporations: B.C. Rail, B.C. Hydro and the Ocean Falls Corp. B.C. Rail reported a net loss of $45.9 million compared with a loss of $39.1 million last year; Ocean Falls lost $4.2 million compared with a deficit of $2.6 million last year; and Hydro lost $13.7 million, half of last year's $27.7 million loss.

Asked if recently announced increases in the central bank rate, being quickly passed on to the public, would have any notable effect on B.C.'s economy, and how it might reflect on his budgetary figures, Wolfe said he agreed with federal officials that it would "be tough medicine to take."

After noting how B.C.'s economy and flows of cash were closely related to the U.S., he added:

"Obviously, given a period of time, it is going to affect our economy. Nobody can deny this. We can only hope it's a short-term remedy and will be effective in dealing with a very serious problem—inflation."

Wolfe said in his presentation that B.C.'s rate of inflation was only 7.9 per cent, compared with the national figure of 9.6 per cent.

$5-billion oil plant needed but plan changes sought

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta energy resources conservation board said Monday the proposed $5-billion Esso Resources Canada Ltd. heavy oil plant at Cold Lake was necessary to Canada's energy future but should go ahead only with changes to the original Esso design.

In a 210-page final report to the Alberta cabinet, the board said the project, which it approved in principle in August, could come on stream in 1986.

The operation is expected to produce 140,000 barrels of crude daily. The board said that without oil sands plants, demand for Canadian oil west of Montreal would exceed supply by 1988.

But the board questioned Esso's ability to recover, as proposed, 20 per cent of the 8.2 billion barrels of bitumen at the project site without supplementary techniques.

It rejected requests to use natural gas to heat the production process and to take some of the plant's large water requirement from nearby Cold Lake.

It called for planning to alleviate various social effects, including a potential population increase of 18,000.

It said the provincial government should look to compensate displaced local trappers and "clarify the legality of affirmative action programs (for hiring local residents and natives) as soon as possible."

Protesters crowd street in front of stock exchange

Exchange foils protest aim

NEW YORK (AP) — To the beat of a brass band, more than 1,000 anti-nuclear demonstrators tried in vain Monday to close the New York Stock Exchange on the 50th anniversary of the stock market crash.

Police reported 1,045 arrests in what was the largest of several anti-nuclear demonstrations across the United States.

In Washington, D.C., about 250 protesters blocked doorways to the energy department and rallied on Independence Avenue.

In Bangor, Wash., 88 persons were taken into custody during a protest at the Trident nuclear submarine base.

In New York, scores of demonstrators jammed the exchange on Wall Steet and Broad Street, saying their targets were firms that finance the nuclear industry. Clowns on stilts mingled with the peaceful protesters.

"Don't go to work today and take a holiday from death," one demonstrator urged the stock exchange employees.

Both Wall Steet and Broad Street were closed and traffic was backed up for nine blocks.

Among the first to be arrested was Daniel Ellsberg, key figure in the Vietnam-era Pentagon Papers case.

The exchange brought many of its employees in early and opened on schedule to active trading.

"We intend to remain open and operate normally," said one exchange official.

On the exchange floor, a roar went up when the 10 a.m. bell signalled the start of trading. "Usually they cheer when it's closing," said James Fuller, a senior vice-president. "All the people are in. We're fully staffed. It has had no effect on the market."

Apart from occasional brief scuffling at police barricades, the mood was festive, with the 15-piece band providing circus music.

"I haven't had this much fun since the 1960s," Police Capt. Thomas Ryan said, referring to the many anti-war protests of that decade.

Police dragged some of the demonstrators away by the arms, others were transported on stretchers. Ten buses were on hand, along with a similar number of small police wagons. Most of the protesters were taken to police headquarters. The overflow was taken to Brooklyn for booking.

Most of those arrested were charged with disorderly conduct, or obstruction of governmental administration. Those who lay down were booked for resisting arrest. Police said 750 summons were issued and 209 persons were jailed. It could not be determined if some protesters received more than one summons.

Cyndy Lazaroff, 22, one of 40 Princeton students at the demonstration, briefly chained herself to a lamp post with three others. "We'll stay here until we make our point understood," said the woman, a senior politics major from Pittsburgh. "We want people to know where nuclear investments begin."

"This is a new focus for the anti-nuclear movement," said Sharon Tracy, a protest leader. "Until now it's been focused just on the installations. Now we're targetting the financiers."

Israel denies push on Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli tanks supported by artillery fire pushed into south Lebanon Monday but were driven back across the border by Palestinian guerrilla fire, radio and Palestinian news agency reports said.

In Tel Aviv, the Israeli military command denied any such attack. "Nothing of the kind happened," a spokesman said.

The government-controlled Beirut radio, right-wing Phlangist radio and the Palestinian news agency WAFA said the attack centered near the strategic Khardaly Bridge between Marjayoun and Nabatiyeh, six miles north and eight miles northwest of the border.

The valley and the bridge separate the Christian rightist forces of renegade Lebanese Maj. Saad Haddad at Marjeyoun and Palestinian positions at Nabatiyeh.

Beirut radio said five Israeli armored vehicles, protected by artillery fire from both Israelis and Haddad's forces, struck at the Khardaly Bridge but were driven back by Palestinian gunfire.

There was no immediate confirmation of the report from the Lebanon government in Beirut or from other official sources.

The Palestinian news agency WAFA said the shooting went on after dark. The reports said both Israeli armored vehicles and Haddad's troops, armed and supported by Israel, opened the attack in the late afternoon.

Park's aide questioned

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Military investigators arrested the chief secretary of President Park Chung-hee Monday night and questioned him on how he escaped unharmed from the gunbattle in which Park and five bodyguards were killed, sources said Tuesday.

North Korea, which ordered its army on alert after Park's assassination Friday, said Monday that South Korea was facing a "growing crisis." U.S. intelligence detected no signs of imminent attack from the Communist North.

The United States sent an aircraft carrier task force and early warning planes to the area. South Korea's 600,000-man army and the 39,000 U.S. force that supports it also were on alert.

The sources reporting the arrest of Park's secretary, Kim Kae-won, said no charges had been lodged against him and that they were unsure where he was taken.

A government spokesman said he had no information that Kim had been arrested. The martial law command said nothing.

Angered worker holds president

HOUSTON (UPI) — A disgruntled employee wearing a "Be Patient" T-shirt and carrying a pistol and phoney hand grenade seized the president of the United Gas Pipe Line Co. and three other persons Monday and held them hostage for two hours.

Police arrested Raymond Reyes Garza, 29, on the 13th floor of Pennzoil Place North Tower about noon. No one was hurt. Garza told police he had been fired from a job with United in Lake Charles, La.

A police spokesman said charges were delayed pending a psychiatric evaluation.

Officers said Garza used a .32-caliber pistol and a phoney hand grenade to gain entrance to United's offices about 10 a.m. Police said Garza held at gun point United Gas Pipe Line president John F. Brown, vice president John B. Clopton of United Energy Resources Inc., the parent firm, and two unarmed security guards.

High-rise fire claims three

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A pre-dawn fire trapped hundreds of residents Monday in a luxury downtown high rise apartment complex.

Three persons were killed, including a married couple who died in an 11-storey leap with their pet poodle.

"The woman kept screaming, 'For God's sake, someone help me,'" said one resident who witnessed the death leap. The husband's robe shot up in flames before he jumped from the window

The third victim, who lived across the hall from the married couple in the apartment where the fire was believed to have started, was trapped in a smoke-filled corridor.

Hundreds of residents in the 19-storey West Tower of the Bunker Hill apartments lived above the reach of fire department ladders, and ironically, were saved by the failure of two alarm systems to function.

A fire inspector said if the systems, one of them newly installed, had worked, residents might have crowded into smoke-filled corridors attempting to escape. Instead, most stayed in their apartments.

It took fire fighters an hour to bring the blaze under control. Damage was estimated at $350,000.

Killed in the futile jump were Thomas Maxwell, 59, and his wife Joyce, 50. Maxwell apparently took the couple's pet poodle, Pepe, in his arms when he jumped. The dog's body was found on the concrete patio next to its master's

The third victim was Sidney Karton, 44, whose body was found in a hallway. Investigators said the blaze apparently started in Karton's apartment, possibly by a cigarette that ignited furniture, and "blowtorched" across the hall to the Maxwells'.

Fire Chief John Gerard said the Maxwells, who were only using the apartment while the occupants were away, ran from the bedroom to a window ledge in the living room, where flames "burned the robe off the back" of the husband as he tried to shield his wife from the flames. She apparently jumped first.

The bedroom was virtually untouched by flames, Gerard said, and "had they elected to stay in their bedroom, they probably would not have been threatened."

The truth and alcoholism

THE JOURNAL of the American Medical Association in its current edition reports a study which says that moderate consumption of alcohol may reduce the risk of heart disease. But an editorial in the same edition warns doctors to look cautiously at these findings.

"With 17 million alcoholics in this country, we perhaps have a message for which this country is not yet ready," writes one doctor in connection with the study.

The implication in those words is that the people — meaning those of us who aren't doctors — aren't ready for, or can't handle the truth about alcohol, whatever that truth may be. Such is the ignorance and the paranoia over alcohol, even in the medical profession.

Ducking the truth produces alcoholics. Facing the truth has salvaged many of them. That is the essential lesson from the one organization — Alcoholics Anonymous — which has had consistent success battling alcoholism. How many doctors understand that?

Alcoholism is now among the top three disease killers in Canada, alongside cancer and cardiovascular problems. Actuarial tables show people suffering from alcoholism will live on average 12 fewer years.

Obviously the medical profession has a critical role to play battling this disease. But how well are our medical schools arming our physicians?

One of our readers, a sober alcoholic and a longtime member of Alcoholics Anonymous, recently visited a doctor who was relieving for his family physician. In the course of his examination our reader mentioned he was an alcoholic. To his surprise, the doctor asked: "Are or were?" Our friend went on to explain that once you are, you will continue to be for the rest of your life.

That's the sort of truth Alcoholics Anonymous deals in. It's time that it was the sort of truth all of our doctors dealt in too.

Sombre etchings

COMMENDABLE THOUGH the principle is, recycling can be carried too far.

Take the advertisement seen in a country store near Nottingham, England: "For sale. Secondhand tombstone. Bargain for family named Perkin."

The first reaction is to be intrigued by the particular cirumstances which led to this bizarre bit of advertising. Was the unidentified Perkin the black sheep in his family, who initially ordered the tombstone to do the decent thing and then recoiled at the cost, figuring he wasn't worth it? Is it a custom in the frugal Perkin clan to maintain tombstones only for a token 10 years or so, and then reclaim some of their outlay?

But then, thought processes being what they are, come other reflections — all negative.

First off, it's kind of cheap. Dear departed Uncle Fred, who was entertaining visions of a fancy marble job loaded with extras, might be a little dispirited, so to speak, at the thought of a utilitarian slab picked up on special. Secondhand, at that.

Then again, free enterprise could make the whole thing snowball distastefully, to the point where we're inflicted with used tombstone lots offering "clean" and "immaculate" models, perhaps even "handyman's specials."

Some issues where politicians can't win

Paul Hellyer

TORONTO — People who are skeptical of politicians might be a little more tolerant if they stopped to consider how many "no-win" situations there are to be faced.

The proposed increase in the price of oil is a case in point. Prime Minister Clark says a higher price is necessary to get us to conserve energy, to finance further exploration and to encourage the development of substitutes.

The other side of the coin, however, is pinched pocket-books — especially for low income groups. Trade unions will fight for bigger (inflationary) settlements. Jobs will be lost because industry is less competitive. And there is no guarantee that the multinationals won't take their windfall profits and head for the South China Sea. In these circumstances only a magician would know where the balance of benefit lies.

A related problem concerns the future of atomic reactors. Compared to electricity from oil, nuclear power is cheap and available. Nevertheless a highly visible minority is opposed and will do everything in its power to scare off further development. If the government succumbs to this pressure, however, it runs the risk — in the event of an electrical brownout or blackout a few years down the road — of reaping the wrath of electors who know it could have been prevented.

Environment Minister John Fraser is on another potential collision course. Scientific reports on the effects of acid rain have some of us pretty uptight. It was bad enough when we thought the problem was limited to our recreational lakes. Now that we know that our precious agricultural land is endangered, a bad situation has become a crisis.

Fraser has to act. The standards must be tightened with or without provincial agreement. But what if that should persuade INCO to abandon its Sudbury works in favor of expanded operations in Indonesia and Guatemala? It's one thing to shut down the mill for a few days as suggested by Ontario Environment Minister Harry Parrott (about as effective as a Band-aid on a broken leg), but it would be something else to denude Sudbury of its major employer at a time when the city hasn't yet recovered from last winter's devastating strike.

Immigration Minister Ron Atkey is on the horns of another dilemma. Should he permit the entry of an additional 50,000 boat people? If he doesn't, he will face the moral indignation of the churches and the left-lib commentators. If he does, the "silent majority" who are concerned about the country's capacity to absorb immigrants of varied cultures may rebel.

Finally it should be noted that Joe Clark is not yet off the hook on his Israeli Embassy policy. He made it very clear at a recent press conference that he's not anxious to discuss the question with his roving ambassador, Robert Stanfield, who has returned from the Mideast. (Other matters perhaps, but not the embassy.) That was Clark's jocular way of admitting that he wants to postpone "the crunch" as long as possible.

If he ultimately decides that his policy should stick but that the timing is not propitious, the Israelis would understand. That might not be good enough for the Arabs, however. Recent spokesmen have made it clear that only a complete reversal is acceptable if Canada wants to get back in their good books and avoid economic sanctions. A reversal, however would produce acute indigestion from eating crow — and Jewish voters would be dismayed.

The power to make these decisions is what politics is all about— but the choices are not always easy.

An Anglican bishop in the front line calls World Council of Churches racist

Rt. Rev. Robert Mercer

Bishop of Matabeleland

Rt.Rev. Robert Mercer is the Anglican Bishop of the Diocese of Matabeleland in Zimbabwe Rhodesia. Prior to being appointed to this post in Bulawayo, he was deported from South Africa for his anti-apartheid views.

Despite his liberal Christian outlook he has long been an outspoken critic of the World Council of Churches' policy of giving financial support to the Patriotic Front. His article — specially prepared for the Colonist — was written just prior to the WCC reversing its policy of making grants to terrorist organizations.

Theoreticians talk in accents of whipped cream as they try to sound plausible about the World Council of Churches' grant to the Patriotic Front guerilla forces now operating in Zimbabwe Rhodesia under the leadship of Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe. "The Church must be seen to be doing what it is doing", says Bishop (now Archbishop) Lewis Garnsworthy of Toronto.

But what does the program to combat racism actually feel like inside Zimbabwe Rhodesia, far from the desks and filing cabinets of the Anglican Church of Canada's headquarters at 600 Jarvis Street, Toronto.?

The institutional Anglican Church seems to have suffered less than other denominations so far. Two of our secondary schools have been evacuated to town. Another secondary school, two primary schools and a clinic have had to be abandoned. Nine priests have fled their parishes in fear of their lives. Three others have been roughed up, one of them having his Bible and Book of Common Prayer burned.

Some are still at their posts, at considerable risk to their lives. I live in anxiety, expecting to hear any day from now that one of them has been murdered. An ordinand has been killed. The Diocesan income drops and we find it increasingly difficult to pay our clergy, most of whom are married men with families to raise — who are not going to find secular employment in these times of sanctions and an ailing economy.

But, of course, the Church is not an institution. When it comes to the men and women in the pews, to the holy plebs of God, then I dare say Anglicans have suffered as much as other Christians: burned alive in their huts, slowly beaten to death, dismembered alive, raped, robbed, bullied, abducted.

Four years ago a black priest in my diocese spoke admiringly of the "freedom fighters" and of the "boys". Later he spoke more neutrally of the "guerillas". Now he calls them "the servants of Satan". Why this change of his attitude? He and his people have had practical experience of the protegees and beneficiaries of the WCC. His opinion of the WCC and of Archbishop Scott (Primate of the Canadian Anglican church and Moderator of the WCC) has altered accordingly.

When I think of what other denominations have suffered, I remember the funerals I've attended: two Salvation Army women; two Roman Catholic laybrothers; a Dutch reformed minister and his wife; a Roman Catholic woman doctor; four Roman Catholic nuns. I think that the RC roll of martyred missionaries now stands at 28; the Pentecostal roll at 13.

It's odd, don't you think, that those who set out to kill Christian missionaries are getting moral respectability and money from the World Council of Churches? Overseas churches are seen to be doing what they are doing!

What of the claim that the missionaries were murdered by the Rhodesia Zimbabwean army to give the guerillas a bad name? It's the most brilliant ploy since propaganda was invented. How jealous the IRA must be that it couldn't persuade world opinion that it was the British army which killed Lord Mountbatten in order to give the IRA a bad name.

One of the most distressing of recent martyrdoms was that of John Bradburne, a Roman Catholic layman who lived with and ministered to the lepers at Mtemwa.

He was like another St. Francis. He owned nothing. He lived in the simplest and most uncomfortable of shacks. He was widely revered as a saint by men of all religions. Yet the protogees of the WCC first abducted and later killed him.

That racism is an evil is not in dispute. That racism must be combatted is not in dispute. But the WCC concentrates exclusively on the wrongs done by whites to blacks. It is uninterested in the wrongs done by blacks to blacks, which are no less heinous. Why no program to combat tribalism? That's an evil that afflicts all Africa, from Cape to Cairo.

Why no program to combat Marxism? Why no program to protect Christians from persecution? Why no financial aid to the black resistance movement in Mozambique? Because the World Council of Churches consists of inverted racialists, and inverted racialism is racialistic.

The White House led CIA astray

Joseph C. Harsch

WASHINGTON — I have just been reading with fascination and shock a new book just out on the history of the Central Intelligence Agency.

It is called "The Man Who Kept The Secrets," meaning Richard Helms, who was head of the agency from 1966 to 1973, but that is a misnomer. It is in fact the story of the CIA from its origins in the OSS (Office of Strategic Services) in the Second World War down to the present.

It is the first broad account I have yet seen of the whole story. It is objective, neither for nor against. It is not an "exposure" of alleged misdeeds, nor is it a "gee whiz, ain't they wonderful" story about spies. It just tells the story.

The shock to me in reading the story is to find out how many failures there were. We all know about the Bay of Pigs. I did not know until reading this book that there also was an operation back during the "cold war" era when the CIA thought it was in touch with a Polish underground organization. But there was no real Polish underground. Those were Soviet agents playing a successful cat and mouse game with Allen Dulles's overeager neophytes in Washington.

Many critics of the CIA have fastened on such things as domestic spying on American citizens and use of drugs on unsuspecting persons during experiments. Such improprieties long since, supposedly, have been stopped. I trust they have been. But such positive misdeeds do not shock me in the way that the discovery of failures does.

I long had supposed that on balance the CIA had more successes than failures. It had its successes, although two of its earliest successes seem to have gone sour. The first spectacular success was the overthrow of Mohammed Mossadegh in Iran in 1953 and the return to power of the shah. The sequel is painful. The second success was the overthrow of the left-leaning regime in Guatemala in 1954. Col. Carlos Castillo-Armas was set up by clandestine U.S. guns. Guatemala still lives in a state of political instability, perhaps more precarious now than ever.

Against those two successes, both apparently of doubtful long-term value to the United States, must be set up a long series of spectacular failures running from the Bay of Pigs disaster to the enormous investment in operations connected with the Vietnam war.

Worst of all, to my mind, is the account of the effort of specialists and experts in the CIA to get the Pentagon and the White House to accept realistic figures about enemy military strength in Vietnam. Obviously, people down at the lower levels of the CIA knew the score with remarkable accuracy. But it took the shock of the Tet offensive to make it possible for Helms at the top of the CIA to be able to tell the White House what it did not want to hear.

Until Tet, the Pentagon and White House operated on the assumption of a maximum enemy troop strength of 270,000. The CIA experts long before had reached the conclusion that 500,000 was a more realistic figure. The experts, and Helms, tried to get the figures changed. They could not, until Tet shook the White House to its foundations. Lyndon Johnson finally faced reality, and soon thereafter announced he would not run for re-election.

There is not much use in a big and expensive intelligence operation in Washington if the White House will not listen to what the experts have to tell it about enemy strength, or weakness.

The blame is not so much with the CIA itself as with those who insisted on trying to misuse it for domestic political ends. Most of the CIA's failures resulted from pressure from the White House to do things which were beyond its capacity, or attempted against its better judgment. The truly great successes seem to have been more or less accidental. One voluntary Soviet defector or supplier of information from within the Kremlin is worth a thousand attempts at subversion from the outside.

The most useful source of information the CIA ever had in Moscow was a volunteer, Oleg Penkovsky. But no amount of money or experts in Washington can manufacture an Oleg Penkovsky. They just happen.

The main conclusion I draw from the book is that President Carter was abundantly correct in telling Adm. Stansfield Turner to rebuild the CIA. It also needs to be protected from pressures on it from the outside which have caused it to do a lot of foolish things.

CAPITAL TALK

By DOUG SMALL
Colonist-FP News Service

OTTAWA — As prime minister, some of Joe Clark's more awkward moments come when he has to choose worthy French Canadians for prestige appointments. It's not that there is any shortage of worthy French Canadians. There isn't. It's just that there aren't that many worthy French Canadian Conservatives. And even those that might, ideologically speaking, be more inclined to Tory blue than Liberal rouge have shown a marked reluctance to join the Clark cause. As a case in point, Clark has tried, but has not yet found any contemporary high-profile French-Canadian Quebecers aside from Roch LaSalle for his cabinet. (Jacques Flynn and Martial Asselin don't count, of course, because they were already in the Senate).

This, then, makes all the more tantalizing the rumor we hear that Clark has convinced none other than Le Grand Maire himself, Jean Drapeau, to be his ambassador to France. The appointment may well not be made for some time yet. Canada's current ambassador, Gerard Pelletier, has been asked by External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald to stay on until next June. By then, Pierre Trudeau's old colleague Pelletier will have held the job five years.

But if, as we hear, Drapeau takes the job it will be news as welcome to Clark as it would to many Montrealers, who are still digging their way out from under some of his more extravagant Olympic and other spending loads of the past. For Clark, of course, Drapeau's acceptance would mean prestige points galore. The French know Drapeau. For all his shortcomings, he is nicely acquainted with the grand style. And the move would no doubt be trumpeted by Clark's operatives in Quebec as a symbol of the prime minister's new close relations with notables in the province.

In any event, there's little doubt that Drapeau would fit comfortably in the role of ambassador. He already knows the language peculiar to diplomats. Take one of his last speeches, for instance, the one to the Canadian Club in Montreal last March when, among other things, he said: "I want and hope wholeheartedly to be well understood. Let no one misinterpret what I am saying, what I am thinking. Above all, let no one say that I have said things which I have not said, and which I have not said precisely because I do not think them."

Amen.

No presidential visit is complete without a little culture, and organizers have tapped the acclaimed dancers of Les Grandes Ballets Canadiens for the mandatory entertainment item on Jimmy Carter's Nov. 9-10 odyssey-to-Ottawa itinerary.

The dancers are honored and all that. But the way we hear it, there's some ruffling in the tutu set over the tight timing on performance night. Those making arrangements for the Carters, it seems, want the dancing out of the way in the early evening, before a state dinner at Government House. That means a special extra performance for the president and his people in advance of the group's regular show for paying customers later in the night.

Occasionally, the dancers will do a matinee and night show on the same day. But even a break that long between shows is considered barely adequate. The proposed back-to-back performances will stretch the finely-tuned muscles of Les Grandes Ballets to the limit of endurance, raising the possibility of all kinds of faux pas, de deux and otherwise.

Incidentially, Carter's organizers are just having the worst time trying to nail down all the little details of the visit. So to take some of the pressure off, this is to let them know that at the state dinner Nov. 9 at Rideau Hall, the president will be fed: Consomme Bytown, smoked salmon, bannock (you know, that marvellous native dough-like substance that can keep one going for ages), brome duck a l'Assiniboia, rice, glazed turnips, grilled tomatoes, French pastry and some ice cream thing called le bomb glacee. Wines? Puligny-Montrache 1973, Chambolle-Musigni-Amouresues 1971 and champagne. Nothing Canadian, of course.

Rebuttal levelled about pheasants

On Oct. 23, your paper carried a news item about the controversial issue of a Pheasant and Conservation Club which has engaged my farm at Duncan for this purpose. I wish to rebut some of the statements which appeared.

First, I would like it to be understood that pheasant hunting only takes place in the winter months, September to March.

Dr. Hocker states: "Somenos Lake and the Norcross Road vicinity have become a residential neighborhood and are no longer what once could be considered as open farm land." I do not live close to Dr. Hocker. Where I live my farm and all the farms surrounding me, which constitute close to 100 per cent of the land area, are all locked into the Agricultural Farm Reserve and in no way would any of us be permitted to dispose of our land for residential development.

He says, "children of all ages roam the width and breadth of this area." Children should not be on my farm. It is a working, food-producing farm with cattle and electric fences. It is not a recreational area.

Then, he goes on to say that my property borders on Somenos Lake. This is not so. At the narrowest point it is at least a half mile away from the lake and there are two farm properties, also locked into the land reserve, between mine and the lake. Moreover, it is 50 feet higher than the lake. There will be no shooting to disturb the nesting of water fowl as I am not anywhere near that place. Also, water fowl do not nest in the winter time.

With reference to his dislike of the noise of the discharge of firearms, I frequently hear particularly in the winter months shooting from the direction of Somenos Lake, this shooting is not on my farm. I doubt if Dr. Hocker could hear firearms discharged on my farm.

In regard to Mr. Paddle, I did not approach him for his approval as I knew he would not give it. The letter I took around to my neighbors asked them to sign it if they had no objection, and they did. Mr. Paddle seems to object to other things I do, even to the extent of trying to stop me irrigating my own land.

Farmers don't usually graze cattle in the winter as they know they would not get 40 per cent of next year's grass crop if they did. There will be no shooting near Mr. Paddle's line fence and his cattle will come to no harm if they remain on his own land.

Mr. Comer says there are sufficient pheasants here for the available habitat. This is not so. I graduated from the University of B.C. in agriculture, majoring in poultry husbandry, which includes pheasants, and did research work for my master's degree at the same university, also in poultry husbandry. Several years ago there were pheasants on my farm. There are none here now and my farm will support a pheasant population.

Does Mr. Comer know that there are 16 different breeds of pheasants that are almost extinct except in one country, England, where they have been preserved by clubs such as this?

He says that since the ban was imposed on shooting there has been a significant increase in population. This is not so. How could there be when we are surrounded by land in the land reserve?

Beef farming does not provide a living today despite the high prices paid at the retail level. If I am to be granted the privilege of farm taxes I am required to produce a certain amount of revenue each year. If I converted to dairy farming it would cost me a quarter of a million dollars and then I would have to obtain a quota which would probably not be available.

I retired five years ago on a pension which does not increase as wages, salaries, professional fees and everything else does these days. If I didn't have this pension, and each year its value lessens with inflation, I would not be able to live on this farm which I have taken 20 years to develop. This is a winter enterprise which would give me a little additional income. I like the Cowichan Valley and I like farming. I can't do as I please with my land, as other property owners can who are not locked into the land reserve. I am in favor of preserving agricultural land but I don't like being squeezed by both sides.

Our food prices not the cheapest

I don't write to the newspapers often, but I felt I had to say something about a report I heard the other day that the lowest food prices are here on the Island.

I drove up to Manson Creek three weeks ago and compared prices all the way up and back. Considering the long freight haul and conditions, I found the food prices, with the exception of Manson Creek which is 120 miles north of Fort St. James, not too much higher than here in Victoria with all the food processors and manufacturers around us.

In fact, I bought toothpaste in one variety store in Prince George and found the price lower than here. One item I bought was 70 cents cheaper than what I had paid for it here the month previously. The same make too.

That so-called report is just to justify the exorbitant prices we are forced to pay for everything on the Lower Mainland and in Victoria.

ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

VANCOUVER — Did Bill Bennett really choose the right profession after all?

Would he, on reflection, be happier back there in the sun-lit Okanagan Valley closing land deals, building more supermarket plazas, plotting yet another finance company?

A surprising number of people, as Bill Bennett's fortunes fall into a bad patch, are asking whether a workaholic who spends his nights alone with his papers in his penthouse until midnight is really the type of person fit to run the province of British Columbia?

The man who had probably the most spectacular rise of any Canadian politician heads into his party's annual convention on Thursday with scandal lapping round his feet and his own followers questioning not only his judgment but — zounds and gadzooks — his toughness.

To question a Bennett as to toughness is somewhat akin to questioning Dolly Parton's genes, but it's a legitimate query these days as MiniWac waffles and fumbles over a pack of dirty tricksters in his midst who can't or won't be fired.

Bennett's problems are rooted in the background that gave him such a reputation for fierce determination and stubborn singlemindedness.

Aided of course by his father's astute timing, Bennett inherited W. A. C.'s riding, was elected leader of Social Credit and defeated the NDP in 1975 to become premier — all in little more than two years.

As someone who had spent the first 40 years of his life in the small town of Kelowna piling up a million dollars, Bennett was almost contemptuous of many of the political colleagues he inherited — finding them lazy, lacking in resolution and ambition. The hard boy from the marketplace would show them what toughness was.

Most of Bennett's cabinet learned to be terrified of him. Perhaps that's why they seemed to stand aside as he conducted his one-man (and near disastrous) election campaign this spring and was nearly toppled by a low-key NDP that gained 47 per cent of the vote.

What surprised — and obviously bored — the voters was Bennett's old-fashioned scare tactics that the godless socialists were at the gate. Even more offensive to many was his tactic of accusing the NDP of something called "national socialism."

When it was pointed out to him that that happened to be the formal name of the Nazy party and that NDP leader Dave Barrett, being a Jew, would be particularly offended, Bennett declined to withdraw his remarks and left the clear impression with the electorate that his knowledge of history,' if not of taste, left something to be desired.

What has become clear is that tough-guy Bennett in fact cannot rid himself of the rusty free-enterprise buccaneers who helped to drag down his father with their fanatieism.

Still the dominant influence on the Socred party faithful is the flame-haired deputy premier Grace McCarthy, who according to the Parliamentary Guide was married at 15 before establishing a prosperous florist chain. A protege of W. A. C. Bennett, her passion against the evils of state inference are legendary.

Still the major influence on the tone set in the premier's office is another old W. A. C. minister, Dan Campbell, a combative collection of barbed-wire and old rope who feels that any and all tactics are permissible in the trench warfare of politics.

With this type of thinking still surrounding Bennett, it was like an old movie re-run when it was discovered that party flunkies had conducted a seminar instructing Socred workers how to fake letters-to-the-editor and otherwise discredit the NDP.

The fact that those in charge taped the session and then shipped 170 copies around the province to get the message across further emphasizes the belief — filtering down from those close to the premier — that the enemy must be stopped by any means.

That the flapdoodle has been allowed to fester and grow for weeks illustrates the other Bennett weakness. On a Japan tour during the "dirty tricks" revelations, the self-made millionaire from the small town demonstrated that he has never learned to delegate.

No one in his party had the gumption or the authority to sack the tricksters. When he did return, he treated it all as a bit of a joke, encouraging the public to further question his judgment.

Now he has to enter his convention as an eight-man RCMP team investigates the swarm of forged letters that have popped up all across B.C. It seems clear the probe will get into the area of deputy premier McCarthy, who addressed part of the celebrated seminar, and her aide, who was involved in the taping.

The inflexible premier, who was going to show weak politicians how politics should be run, could only watch last week when that dreaded socialist Dave Barrett was given an unusual invitation to address the staid businessmen of the Canadian Club.

When the chairman said Barrett was the only living ex-premier "but the way things are going, he may soon have company," the men of the marketplace beat their palms with applause. One assumes Bill Bennett heard it.

Postal services are praised

These days we hear considerable criticism of the mail service in Canada and other countries. For a change I would like to write a few words of praise for the postal services of Canada and England, for the following reason.

A couple of days ago I received a letter from my sister in Leeds, postmarked Leeds, M.L.O. (possibly Main Letter Office) 4:15 p.m., Oct. 15, 1979. This letter was delivered to my apartment at 10 a.m., Oct. 19, for a total lapsed time of three days, 17¾ hours for what must be something of a record.

My congratulations to the postal services of Canada and England.

TORONTO (CP) — Real estate and construction stocks rose Monday as the Toronto stock market started the week on a strong note.

The TSE 300 index closed on the upside, boosted by bargain-hunting after last week's losses and hopes for good results from frontier oil exploration.

Ira Gluskin, an analyst with Brown, Baldwin, Nisker Ltd., said, "I think the consensus on the market is that they (real estate stocks) have fallen fast enough that they are back to being good value again."

Trading in shares of Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum Ltd. was halted at the opening but resumed at 11:50 a.m. The stock closed down ¼ to $32½.

Miami-London route in doubt

Pan Am, National merger approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pan American World Airways, major overseas carrier in the U.S., won government authority Monday to acquire long-sought domestic routes from National Airlines in one of the biggest mergers in airline history.

The Civil Aeronautics Board announced approval of the merger on condition that National's Miami-London route not be transferred to Pan Am. The board has opened a separate hearing to determine which airline should get that route.

THE BOARD'S 77-page order, released Monday, was actually relayed last Thursday to President Carter, whose approval is needed in matters affecting international routes. Carter has 60 days to act.

The merger will result in the nation's seventh largest airline.

PAN AM, whose principal business is in Europe, the Pacific and Latin America, had been virtually excluded from the domestic market by past administrations that wanted to see the U.S. flag extended to more overseas markets.

But that policy, limiting it to a skeletal domestic route system, also pitted Pan Am against subsidized foreign carriers, and, lately, against some domestic competitors now offering foreign flights such as Braniff and Delta.

THE SCRAMBLE for National, the nation's 10th largest airline, began last year with a bid by Texas International, a Houston-based regional carrier. Eastern Airlines and Pan Am joined the fray later on.

Texas International dropped out of the bidding in July after Pan Am announced it had acquired 51 per cent of National's stock. Then, in September, the CAB ruled against Eastern on grounds that a merger would substantially lessen competition in the lucrative new York-Washington-Florida markets served by both carriers.

Back from the brink

LONDON (AP) — One year ago, the U.S. dollar plunged to record lows against major currencies around the world. Rescue moves mounted by Washington have pulled it back but experts looking nervously toward election year say the crisis in confidence is not over.

Despite the recovery, it has been a see-saw year for the dollar overseas. Spiraling oil prices and a rush into gold by worried investors have meant nerve-wracking times for those who use dollars abroad.

"I'D RATHER WE GOT PAID in cheese or razor blades," says one U.S. homemaker in London. "At least we'd know what to look forward to."

The British pounds she buys cost about $2.13 each today. Three months ago they cost $2.35 and 11 months ago, $1.96.

THE DOLLAR RECOVERED promptly from last year's trough after President Carter announced Nov. 1, a recovery package that included a $30-billion currency swap agreement with the national banks of Western Europe and Japan.

But it ran into more serious trouble this summer as overseas investors lost faith in Washington's ability to curb inflation and narrow the gap between U.S. oil-swelled imports and its sales overseas.

AS GOLD PRICES SHOT to $444 an ounce Oct. 2, it looked as if another black October was in the offing. But new tight-money policies from Federal Reserve chairman Paul Volcker have pulled the dollar back from the brink.

The dollar's decline is not new. The post-Second World War days when any American overseas was counted rich are long past. Western Europe rebuilt after the war and the U.S. share of the world economy fell, and the dollar fell too.

BUT THE REAL PROBLEMS started in the summer of 1977. The slide accelerated after an August meeting at which the International Monetary Fund did not like U.S. answers to questions about what was being done about inflation and the trade gap.

In 1978 it became worse. Between the end of June and the end of September the dollar lost 16 per cent against the Swiss franc, 6.4 per cent against the West German mark, 5.7 per cent against the French franc and seven per cent against Japan's yen. The price of gold, the anxious capitalist's traditional haven, jumped to $217.57 from $183.50 an ounce.

ON OCT. 30 GOLD LEAPED to a record $245.25 in London, and the dollar looked like this against other currencies:

- West German mark: a record low of 1.7265 for $1. Down 48 per cent from 10 years before, down 29 per cent in two years and 24 per cent in one. The dollar has recovered about five per cent since.
- British pound had fallen to as low as $1.75 in October, 1977, from $4.03 shortly after the Second World War. The dollar's October, 1978, plunge boosted it to $2.099.
- Swiss franc: the dollar bottomed at 1.4488 Swiss francs Sept. 26. On Oct. 30 it closed at 1.4825. down 33 per cent in one year. The dollar has recovered about 13 per cent.
- Japanese yen: the dollar fell to 178.45 yen, down 39 per cent in two years and 29 per cent in one. The dollar has since recovered 31 per cent as Japan suffers from the oil crisis.

U.S. DOLLAR GAINING STRENGTH

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose sharply against the strong West German mark and gained against all other major currencies, in New York and abroad Monday.

Dealers in New York said the strong showing by the U.S. currency is a result of moves by the Federal Reserve Board to bring the U.S. money supply under control by raising interest rates.

In Frankfurt, West Germany, dealers said the U.S. dollar was also aided by predictions that U.S. trade figures for September, to be announced today, will show a deficit of about $2 billion compared with $2.4 billion in August.

Gold prices, meanwhile, fell $2 an ounce in Zurich but were little changed in London and New York.

After steep declines late last week, gold fell again in Zurich, Europe's major bullion centre, to close at $373.50 a troy ounce, compared with $375.50 Friday. In London the price was unchanged at $374 an ounce. It also finished at $374 in New York, down 50 cents from Friday's close.

Noel: 'I'll see my lawyer'

Alderman won't yield to demand for proof

Saanich Ald. Irene Block refused Monday to bow to a demand she provide proof of her accusations last week that some Saanich aldermen were dishonest and corrupt, despite a threat that she could face legal action over the remarks.

An incensed Ald. Sandy Noel said he would see his lawyer after Block's refusal to produce evidence to substantiate the serious allegations.

"I was shocked by Block's scurrilous statements to a University of Victoria conference alleging dishonesty and corruption," he said.

"I can't sit on this council and accept such a libellous and character-damaging statement to go unchecked."

Another slanderous statement was that "we are tools of big business," he said.

"And then there was the stupid statement about looking at a nice set of legs, for that I look at her more in pity than in anger."

Noel said if Block was unwilling to provide proof, "then she's inviting legal action . . . and I will be seeing my lawyer."

Block, who claimed that a municipal slush fund existed to support the campaigns of aldermen supporting big business, told council her remarks were not intended to rattle any skeletons.

"But what do these aldermen who oppose an elections disclosure bylaw have to fear?"

She said her comments had been substantiated by "the screams of some aldermen. Those who are guiltless are not upset by what I had to say."

Mayor Mel Couvelier, responding to Noel's statement that he would be consulting a lawyer, said council as a body was not in a position to enter the dispute. "The remedy can't lie with this body."

Ald. Fred Severson, stating that he had no guilt complex, recalled that when he first ran for office eight years ago he was given money by a labor council to assist his campaign.

"Big business and labor seem to get involved in elections at all levels," he said.

Ald. Mary Casilio said she voted against the disclosure bylaw last month because she believed it infringed a person's rights.

"I should have the freedom to do as I please. I would never be a party to asking people to declare where their political funds came from," she said.

Lightning hits plane

An Air Canada stretch DC-8 received minor damage but none of the 106 passengers on the Vancouver-to-Victoria flight late Saturday night was injured when lightning struck the aircraft.

The lightning hit the 198-seat plane as it was about to start its initial approach to Pat Bay Airport. It had taken off from Vancouver International Airport at about 11:30 p.m., 35 minutes late.

Glen Steeves, manager of Air Canada's Victoria operation, said the lightning struck near the nose portion of the aircraft, creating a loud noise and a flash, but there was no sudden motion or loss of altitude.

The plane turned back to Vancouver because of the availability of maintenance facilities there, Steeves said, and the passengers were put aboard another stretch DC-8 which took off at 1:30 a.m.

Steeves said there was no turbulence at the time, nor anything showing on the aircraft's weather radar to indicate any impending problem.

Strong plea made for more teachers

A strong pitch for more teaching staff was the central feature of the Greater Victoria school board's first look at its provisional 1980 budget on Monday night.

Declining enrolment, large classes at the intermediate (Grades 4 to 7) level, and an increasing demand for specialized services dictate that the board will have to look hard at increasing its staffing levels, schools superintendent Allan Stables told the board Monday.

In an impassioned speech, Stables told the school board the best investment it can make is in teaching personnel.

"That's where all the education is."

"It is my feeling that this district is beyond the critical level," Stables said in answer to a question from trustee Dr. Martin Levin as to the impact of hiring 10 more teachers for elementary grades.

"Our teachers are running so hard, with so many large classes, that you can't really measure the impact of additional teachers."

The administration's budget proposal calls for an additional 41 teachers, including 16½ elementary teacher librarians, 2½ secondary teacher librarians, 10 elementary teachers, and 12 secondary teachers. They would bring the district's 1980 pupil-teacher ratio to 17.83:1, very close to the provincial average of 17.81:1.

The impact of the additional elementary teachers would be felt primarily at the intermediate level, where the average class size is nearly 28 pupils and classes of 35 students are not uncommon, Stables said.

Declining enrolments have caused serious problems in core subjects in district high schools, he added. In spite of lower enrolments, high schools must offer sufficiently diverse programs, and English and social studies classes have paid the price for smaller enrolments in other subjects. This year, 20 to 25 per cent of all the classes in English and social studies have more than 30 pupils, assistant superintendent Glenn Wall said.

More teachers would enable reductions in those class sizes, giving teachers fewer students and more time to work on weaknesses identified by provincial assessment tests.

Those tests show that the district's academic standards are "teetering on the edge of average," Stables said Monday. Considering Victoria's experienced work force and relatively high family incomes, that performance is disappointing, Stables indicated.

In addition to more classroom teachers and librarians, the administration has suggested a number of other initiatives. Suggested additions to the district are a second native Indian home-school co-ordinator ($15,500), two more speech pathologists ($48,000), a district-wide computing studies program for all high school students ($66,450), and a fine arts consultant for drama, art and music ($33,000).

Even without additional teachers and specialist staff, which would add about $1 million to the district's budget next year if they were hired next September, the provisional budget shows a healthy increase over the 1979 budget.

The total 1980 budget, without new programs or personnel, stands at $54.4 million, 9.5 per cent higher than 1979 expenditures. With the additions requested by the district administration, the total would go to $56.9 million, up 11.7 per cent from the previous year.

The operating budget would rise 9.86 per cent without the additional programs, and 12.28 per cent with them.

The largest increase occurs in teacher salaries, where the board has budgeted for an 8.5 per cent salary increase. That came as news to Greater Victoria teachers' association president Trevor Calkins, whose organization is in the midst of salary negotiations with the district. No offer has been made yet by either side, but the 8.5 per cent is roughly in the area in which settlements are expected to occur this year, Calkins indicated.

Island Road dwellers protest lot size boost

A move to increase the minimum size of lots in Oak Bay's picturesque Island Road area at the southern tip of the municipality drew protests from three residents Monday night.

Plastic surgeon Dr. Alastair Baird, of 655 Island, said if the bylaw passed as currently proposed it looked as though he would be one of a handful left out of the running when it came to subdivision possibilities.

Earlier in the meeting, aldermen had referred the troublesome question back to the zoning committee for further study on the motion of Ald. Neil Swainson. However, Baird demanded, and was given, the right to speak at the end of the meeting.

The committee had recommended an increase in the minimum lot size from 12,000 to 23,985 square feet (.55 of an acre), in the B1 zone, to save a municipal asset from being carved up into small lots.

One subdivision application—from Dennis Harris, 535 Island—has already been rejected by the committee.

"I live on the east side of Island Road," said Baird.

"Those on the west will have subdivision rights, while many on the east have grandfather clauses permitting them to subdivide."

"It looks as if I'll be looking out on suburbia across the road, while the people who live there will be looking out at my side, which I will have to retain in its country lane atmosphere.

"Really it's a double form of taxation. It depreciates my property while it appreciates others."

Baird asked that a form of heritage property be considered for the area to encourage owners to retain the rural atmosphere. "Give us a tax break if that's what you want to do," he said.

Jack Todd, of 528 Island, supported Beard. "When I bought my property (five years ago) the minimum lot size was 10,000 square feet. Then it went to 12,000 and now it's going to 15,000," he said.

The change would prohibit him from subdividing and building a smaller house "at the bottom when I get to the age where I can't get up to the house at the top," he said.

Monday's events followed a stormy session at last Thursday's committee meeting, when Baird was ruled out of order when he demanded that the bylaw be dropped.

Fire loss at least $1 million

Arson has all but been ruled out by a city fire official as the cause of Greater Victoria's most spectacular fire of the year.

A 25,000-square-foot warehouse at 35 Erie was gutted in the blaze that lit up the sky late Saturday and kept 27 firemen including crews from Oak Bay and Esquimalt busy for four hours.

Unofficial preliminary damage estimates ranged from $1 million to $2 million. The total won't be known until the occupants (McQuade's Ships Chandlers was the main tenant of the building vacated in June by Goodwill Bottling) finish an inventory.

Deputy chief Mike Heppell said Monday his department's investigation found no evidence of arson.

Heppell's findings place the point of origin near a truck parked in the centre of the building.

Property to be sold for taxes

The former Legion building at Blanshard and Cormorant passed into the hands of the sheriff Monday, and will likely be sold by the end of the year.

In an unprecedented order as far as the city of Victoria was concerned, the property at 615 Blanshard, formerly known as the Canadian Legion Britannia branch building, was ordered sold for taxes in a county court judgment handed down Monday.

The property, valued by the B.C. Assessment Authority at $463,550, is owned by Borgie Larsen and Garner City Development. They failed to pay 1978 taxes in the amount of $10,412. The company also owes $4,000 income tax.

Once the property goes on the block, the income tax will be paid first and then property tax. Anything over the sum of those two amounts will go toward mortgages on the property.

Next target for the city will be the Roanne Properties site on Cormorant Street, valued at nearly $1 million, with outstanding taxes of about $25,000.

In county court Monday the city was allowed to add 13 per cent onto the outstanding tax owed by Roanne. The judgment also said Roanne has no answer to city claims against the property.

Oak Bay to vote on major parks

Oak Bay residents will vote in referendum Nov. 17 on whether they want six major parks in the municipality formally dedicated as parkland.

The vote, to be taken in connection with the election of mayor and aldermen, is a belated followup to a 1973 referendum in which voters were 10 to 1 in favor of formally dedicating all parkland in the municipality to prevent alienation.

Ald. Shirley Dowell told council Monday night that the bylaws dedicating the parks had not been followed through due to illness and a changeover in municipal staff at the time.

The issue rose again early this year when Roger and Barbara Napier, 80 King George Terrace, proposed a land swap to facilitate a subdivision of their property.

Since then, titles to the various parks have been researched and a bylaw dedicating the smaller parks has been passed.

However, the major parks require voter approval through a referendum before formal dedication can be made.

The parks involved are:

- Anderson Hill, 6.297 acres;
- Carnarvon, 9.81 acres;
- Mary Tod Island, five acres;
- Walbran, 4.92 acres;
- Willows, 2.92 acres;
- Windsor, 10.65 acres.

Neighbors up in arms over addition to house

Residents of Oak Bay would never descend to tarring and feathering one of their neighbors, but an addition to a house on posh Somass Drive brought the owner a verbal version when council met Monday night.

Neighbors of the Niall Macnaughtons, who live at 2830 Somass, vented their complaints to council although the two-storey addition—about 30 feet long by 14 wide by 22 feet high—is legal, according to subdivision officer John Elsdon.

TEMPERS ARE RUNNING so high that Macnaughton was advised by Pamela Charlesworth, an architect he has hired to try to quieten down the situation, he would be better not to attend Monday night's meeting.

Instead, he sent the charming Mrs. Charlesworth along with a letter apologizing for upsetting his neighbors but pointing out that he had complied with the building regulations as to height and setback.

"We lacked privacy and wanted to expand our view access," the letter explained.

Mrs. Charlesworth said Macnaughton "is not hiding" but had not attended the meeting on her advice, so as not to inflame feelings. "I have never seen animosity develop to this degree on something like this before."

"He asks that you use me as your collective professional. I am an architect with 27 years experience," she said.

HOWEVER, MACNAUGHTON came in for severe criticism from Barry and Mary Beardsmore at 2820 Somass, Dr. James Popkin, of 1833 Beach, Dr. Gerald May, 1857 Bowker Place, building inspector Elsdon, Mayor Brian Smith and Ald. Peter Bunn.

Beardsmore said "we have totally lost our sea view from the dining room, and instead look out on a high wall (the addition) which not only is ugly, but also cuts out some light."

He said he had paid extra for a sea view which had been lost, and demanded council pass bylaws protecting other Oak Bay residents.

Popkin said the addition had obstructed one-third of his view, and demanded a reduction in assessment.

ALD. BUNN, who has made a living in Oak Bay for 20-odd years as a small contractor, said he had never seen such a case of insensitivity to the rights of neighbors than in this case.

Mayor Brian Smith noted the building inspector had detected an illegal suite in the basement, and Bunn said he hoped the letter of the law would be followed in making Macnaughton rip out the ceiling and walls so plumbing and electrical inspections were properly made.

The issue was referred to council's lands, building and housing committee for possible resolution.

Enter: humble shrew

The humble shrew may be another ally to be thrown into the battle against the voracious winter moth grubs that defoliate most of the deciduous trees on the southern Saanich Peninsula every spring.

Gilbert Cook, of 545 Transit, suggested to Oak Bay council Monday night that the tiny creatures "have a voracious appetite for grubs and are largely nocturnal."

He said their use might obviate a lot of expensive research, and he noted they are a fast-breeding animal.

Council referred the idea to its parks and recreation commission.

Council wary of cost

The $2.3-million Royal Theatre facelift-expansion proposal got Oak Bay council's approval in principle Monday night, but aldermen were wary of making any financial commitments.

Victoria Ald. Robert Wright was told that theatre committee would have to come up with innovative money-raising ideas because Oak Bay, although a co-owner of the downtown facility with Victoria and Saanich, doesn't have anything to throw into the kitty.

Sinatra leads Kuhn critics

NEW YORK (AP) — Entertainer Frank Sinatra asked for the removal of baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn because of his action in forcing Willie Mays out of baseball because the Hall of Famer has taken a public relations job with an Atlantic City casino.

"Mr. Kuhn told Willie Mays to get out of baseball," Sinatra said Monday in a formal statement released through his public relations firm, Solters £ Roskin, Inc., "I would like to offer the same advice to Mr. Kuhn."

Sinatra, an avid Los Angeles Dodgers fan, said he was joining "the many who are outraged at the decision . . . because Mays accepted a job with the Park Place Hotel in Atlantic City."

"To suggest that Willie Mays, in accepting a post as a goodwill ambassador for the hotel that happens to have a casino is himself part of a gambling operation, is ludicrous. Then the restaurants in the hotel, the elevators, the bellmen and the doormen, because they are indeed on the premises, are part of gambling for the same logic prevails.

"What he (Willie) has done for baseball is impossible to measure. May I ask what has commissioner Bowie Kuhn done for his game?"

Wilma Rudolph, famous Olympic sprinter who was triple gold medalist in the 1960 Games in Rome, called the commissioner's action "distressing."

"Willie Mays is an inspiration to every youngster," she said. "He has given baseball his life's devotion. I can't understand why such action needs to be taken. You can't be an athlete all your life. Some day you have to turn and walk away."

Rudolph attended the luncheon at which Mays announced his multi-million-dollar contract with the Atlantic City hotel.

Roy White, New York Yankee outfielder who also attended with manager Joe Torre and TV broadcaster Ralph Kiner of the Mets, described Kuhn's action as "unjust."

"A lot of owners own race horses, other athletes, such as Joe Louis and Pancho Gonzales, work at Las Vegas resort hotels," White said. "I think the action is unjustified."

Say Hey Kid opts for hotel contract

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Mays, tears welling in his eyes, said Monday he is more bewildered than embittered by the baseball commissioner's ruling that he must sever all connections with the game because he accepted a multi-million-dollar post with an Atlantic City hotel and gambling casino.

"Baseball has been my life — I worship the game," the 48-year-old Hall of Fame star said. "But it's very important that I take care of my family.

"It looks like I am being farmed out. That's not the case. I am going with a wonderful group. I have to give up my affiliation with the (New York) Mets. I don't know why. That confuses me. But I am not leaving baseball totally. I will be back."

Mays made his comments at a luncheon at which he formally signed a contract with Bally Manufacturing Corp., parent of the Park Place Hotel, to participate in community affairs and special events. The contract calls for $100,000 a year for three years with a provision for an additional seven years at an escalating salary that would peak at $150,000 in 1989.

Earlier in the day, Mays had met for an hour with commissioner Bowie Kuhn in the latter's office. Kuhn told him categorically that if he accepted the Atlantic City position, he must disassociate himself from an existing contract with the Mets.

Mays had two years to go in a sweetheart contract which he signed with the late Mets' owner, Joan Payson, after being traded to the New York club by San Francisco Giants. The contract called for $50,000 a year for 10 years after Willie's retirement.

The onetime Giants' centrefielder said his meeting with the commissioner was an amenable one, although he never understood the reasoning behind his being forced to give up his baseball connection.

"The commissioner didn't try to change my mind, we just talked the matter over," Willie said. "When I saw that his decision was going to stand, I said 'Thank you' and got up and walked out.

"Don't blame the commissioner. The decision was with me. We left with kind words. I have no bitterness in my heart."

Mays was asked if he planned to contest the decision in the courts.

"You know me," he said. "I am not going to fight baseball. If I challenge the commissioner, I challenge baseball. I am not going to do that. I am not going to say baseball is wrong."

Willie was accompanied by his wife, Mae, and his New York lawyer, Steve Lindeman. He maintained tremendous poise and patience through a lengthy television and camera session and then, before tackling lunch, went into a small ante room to be questioned by reporters.

One reporter, prefacing his question with the comment, "This one may be sensitive," asked:

"Some people say you are taking this job because you need the money —is that true?"

Willie couldn't resist a laugh.

"I made a real estate deal in Salt Lake City worth around $1.8 million," he said. "I think I have money. But one never has enough money. With taxes being what they are, if you make $100,000 you get only 75 or 50 per cent of it."

Mays said he was mainly distressed over the term banned from baseball which was used by newspaper headline writers. He admitted that from a public standpoint it thrust him in the category with Shoeless Joe Jackson, who was banished for life for his part in the notorious Black Sox fix scandal in 1919.

"The commissioner told me that the only restriction was that I couldn't wear a uniform and represent any team," the outfielder said. "I can still play in oldtimers' games and do other special events. I can always return to baseball if I give up this job."

Mays said he had been contacted by Billy Weinberger, president of the hotel, last March, and that he had urged Kuhn be advised of the job specifications. He wasn't told until last Friday, however, that he would have to divest himself of baseball connections.

"I could understand if I were a player," he said. "There are a lot of ways a ballplayer can throw a game. But for the last few years I have not been that close to the game.

"In my new job, I won't have anything to do with the casino. My job is to work with the hospital, the kids and the community. I don't know anything about gambling.

"I don't know why the commissioner made the decision. I can't read his mind. He made the decision. I made mine. Sure, I have regrets because I love baseball. But I am also very happy because somebody nice said, 'Come on, Willie, we want to take you and the family with us.'"

Boss fires Billy after latest bout

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin sealed his fate as manager of New York Yankees when he got word to owner George Steinbrenner that he had hit an Illinois marshmallow salesman during a Bloomington, Minn., hotel argument last week, a source close to the team said Monday.

Steinbrenner decided Sunday that he'd had enough of Martin's bar-room bouts and replaced the embattled manager with Dick Howser, a longtime Yankee coach who had left the club last year to become baseball coach at Florida State University.

Steinbrenner was crushed by the affair, according to the source, and remained unavailable for comment Monday on the latest turn of events in the continuing Yankee drama. Martin, too, refused to talk about the matter.

Martin's alleged victim was sent to a hospital where he required 15 or 20 stitches to close cuts on his lip.

Martin denied throwing any punches at the time but the accusation apparently was enough for Steinbrenner.

He and Howser met Sunday at Steinbrenner's horse farm in Ocala, Fla., and that's when Howser got the job.

"We talked for four hours about the strengths and weaknesses of the ballclub," Howser said.

It is a subject with which Howser is familiar. He spent 12 years with the club, two as a player and 10 as the third base coach. He left after the 1978 season to coach at Florida State, but he continued to watch the club's progress.

During his years with the Yankees, Howser was considered managerial timber and was a candidate for a couple of jobs. In fact, he was a one-game stand-in with the Yankees after Martin's tearful resignation in Kansas City on July 24, 1978. Howser lost that game to the Royals and the next day Bob Lemon arrived to take over the managing job.

In the last month Howser has turned down job offers from two other organizations — one a field post, the other a front office position.

High-scoring Clipper with Cougars tonight

By STAN COOPER

Victoria Cougars, up against one of the top teams in the Western Hockey League, have called on highscoring centre John Newberry for tonight's game at Memorial Arena.

Brandon is the opposition for the 8 p.m. game and Newberry, runaway scoring leader in the B.C. Junior Hockey League with Nanaimo Clippers, will likely be facing all-star Rick Knickle in the Wheat King net.

Newberry, a 17-year-old Port Alberni product who played the last two seasons for the Racquet Club midgets, has 32 goals and 61 points after 17 games for the Tier II Clippers, a record-setting pace in the early going.

Coach Jack Shupe has two ailing right-wingers, Randy Zinn (bruised wrist) and Brad Yachimec (charley-horse), and will juggle his lines to accommodate Newberry.

Cougars had a team-record winning streak snapped at 10 games Sunday in Seattle where the Breakers scored a 4-2 victory.

Barry Pederson and Greg Adams scored for the Cougars, who remain four points up on Portland Winter Hawks in the Western Division.

The Wheat Kings extended a New Westminster Bruin losing string to 12 games by charging to a 5-3 victory, the first on a Western Division swing for the defending league and playoff champions.

"We're not blasting many teams out of the building this season," Wheat King coach Dunc McCallum said Monday, "but we have eight rookies and the team will need until Christmas to jell.

"It's quite an adjustment for players used to playing with (Brian) Propp, (Ray) Allison and (Laurie) Boschman."

McCallum was referring to the highest-scoring line in the league last season, a combination which produced 220 goals and 496 points and helped Brandon to an incredible 58-5-9 log and a WHL record 125 points.

Besides Propp, and Allison, McCallum lost defencemen Brad McCrimmon, Tim Lockridge and Mike Perovich to graduation while Boschman was selected as an under-age by Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League entry draft. Four other Wheat Kings, Don Gillen, Dave McDonald, Knickle and Brad Kempthorne were also selected and returned to Brandon for their final season of major junior play.

Zorn bedazzles Falcons

Jim Zorn's razzle-dazzle show was more than Atlanta Falcons could handle Monday night.

The daring Seattle quarterback scored one touchdown, passed for another and set up a third with a 20-yard pass to placekicker Efren Herrera as the Seahawks edged the Falcons 31-28 in a National Football League game at Atlanta.

The Seahawks stunned the Falcons with fourth-down gambles four times during the game, converting three of those and narrowly missing the other.

Zorn scored Seattle's first touchdown on a 34-yard sprint off a quarterback draw on a fourth-down play, and fired a four-yard pass to Sherman Smith for another score in the second quarter as the Seahawks battled back from a 14-point deficit.

Seattle then recovered an onside kick at the Falcons 42 and moved in for a touchdown on an eight-yard run by Dan Doornink 1:54 before halftime for a 21-14 lead.

Doornink's touchdown was set up when the Seahawks faked a 55-yard field goal attempt by Herrera, who broke through the middle and caught the fourth-down pass from Zorn at the Atlanta 17.

Herrera kicked a 26-yard field goal to make it 24-14 in the third quarter.

Seattle's fourth-down gamble that failed gave Atlanta an opportunity to regain momentum, but Tim Mazzetti failed on a 25-yard field-goal attempt.

That gamble came on a fourth-and-12 at the Seattle 32 when punter Herman Weaver passed for nine yards to Jesse Green.

The Falcons got another chance three plays later when they recovered a fumble and Steve Bartkowski made it 24-21 with a 17-yard touchdown strike to Billy Ryckman.

Seattle, 4-5, added a touchdown in the final two minutes on a 26-yard run by Doornink.

Bartkowski immediately rifled a 42-yard pass to Wallace Francis at the Seattle 13 with 45 seconds left.

However, on the next play, Seahawks defensive back Dave Brown leaped high in the end zone and intercepted Bartkowski's pass to end Atlanta's clawing comeback.

Zorn hit on 13 of 25 passes for 197 yards while Doornink led all rushers with 122 yards on 21 carries.

In Sunday highlights:

Franco Harris rushed for 102 yards and scored two touchdowns as Pittsburgh Steelers bounced the Dallas Cowboys 14-3 at Pittsburgh in a replay of last year's Super Bowl. The Steeler defence limited the Cowboys to 73 yards on the ground and a tackle by L.C. Greenwood left Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach with a concussion.

Rookie Phil Simms threw a pair of touchdown passes for his fourth win in as many starts as the New York Giants beat the Rams 20-14 at Los Angeles.

Walter Payton scored three touchdowns and rushed for 162 yards, becoming the first NFL player to pass 1,000 yards this season as the Chicago Bears beat the San Francisco 49ers 28-27.

Carspiel final family affair

VERNON (CP) — Calgary's George Fink captured the sixth annual carspiel Monday night by edging younger brother Danny of Edmonton 5-4 in the championship game.

For the victory, George and his rink won four new cars valued at $20,000.

Fink became the first skip to win the spiel twice. George won the event in 1975, with Danny throwing third rocks.

Danny's team won $5,400 for second place.

Bert Gretzinger of Kelowna, finished third for the second straight year, by defeating Vancouver's Gerry Kent, 6-5 in the consolation final.

Gretzinger won $3,600 while Kent took home $2,400.

Paul Gowsell of Calgary, Bruce Delaney of Ottawa, Edmonton's Matt Baldwin and Len Radcliffe of Kelowna were eliminated in the first playoff round and won $1,500 per rink.

Gowsell eliminated Steve Skillings of Victoria 6-4 in "C" quarter-finals Sunday.

Calgary Games bid wins support

MONTREAL — Calgary was picked over Vancouver as the Canadian Olympic Committee choice for the 1988 Winter Olympics, Sunday, and Vancouver mayor Jack Volrich, who headed the Vancouver delegation, called it a great disappointment.

Calgary's bid was worth $217 million compared to what was billed as Vancouver's "athlete oriented" $80 million proposal.

Don Hamilton, chairman of the Vancouver Winter Olympics Committee, explained it this way:

"The COA went for the bricks and mortar approach. The philosophical difference was that Calgary proposed a large-budget Olympics that involves a great deal of building and monuments.

"Ours was a low-budget Olympics, involving the athletes. Technically, the submissions were identical. I think the final factor was financial."

Hamilton then complimented Calgary by saying: "If Calgary is in a position to being the 1988 Winter Olympics to Canada, we must applaud that."

Volrich suggested that the COA might have a more difficult time selling Calgary to the International Olympic Committee than Vancouver, since local facilities are internationally known through an unsuccessful bid for the 1976 Winter Games.

It was the fifth time Calgary had bid for the Winter Olympics but the first without Banff as a partner.

Volrich also said that Vancouver will be attempting to attract as many international events to Vancouver as possible, including the 1988 Olympic trials.

The IOC decision will be made in 1981. So far, Switzerland, Germany, Sweden, Chile, Japan and Korea have shown interest in mounting bids for the 1988 Games.

Delesalle heads Canadian team

TORONTO — Veteran Philip Delesalle and youngster Elfi Schlegel will lead the Canadian contingent into the world gymnastics championship at Fort Worth and Dallas in December.

Delesalle of Victoria captured the men's over-all title at the third Canadian gymnastics trial during the weekend, while 15-year-old Schlegel of Toronto took the women's title.

The 21-year-old Delesalle finished the two-day competition with 112.90 points. Warren Long, who trains in Berkely, Calif., was second with 110.85 Montreal's Jean Choquette finished third with 110.

Schlegel won the women's title with 74.50 points. Diana Carnegie of Toronto came second with 73.95 and Shannon Fleming of Toronto was third with 73.05.

Delesalle, Long and Choquette will be joined by Danny Gaudet of Toronto, Pierre Clavel of Montreal, Marc Eprecht of Toronto and Marty Sharpe, also of Toronto.

The women's team will comprise Schlegel, Carnegie, Carmen Alie of Montreal, Ellen Stewart of Toronto, Fleming, Kathy McMorrow of Toronto and Patti Jo Knorr of Cambridge, Ont.

Noticeably missing from the women's list is No. 1 ranked Monica Goermann of Winnipeg who is suffering a chipped ankle bone.

The world competition serves a second purpose in also deciding which countries will complete in the 1980 Summer Olympics. Only the top 12 ranked countries will be invited to Moscow.

Lions destined for third spot after loss to host Roughriders

Third place.

That's where B.C. Lions will finish in the Western Conference this season and from the play of the Canadian Football League club in its last three games, that's about right.

Dropping from 9-2-1 to 9-5-1 in three weeks, Lions are now assured of playing the western semi-final in Calgary against the second-place Stampeders on Saturday, Nov. 10.

The site was decided Sunday when Saskatchewan Roughriders downed the visiting Lions 26-12 while Calgary charged to a 28-12 victory over the hapless Argos in Toronto.

In Sunday's other game, Edmonton Eskimos clinched top spot by outscoring Winnipeg Blue Bombers 19-11 in the Alberta capital.

With a record crowd of 28,012 at expanded Taylor Field urging them on, the Roughriders posted only their second victory in 15 starts and four B.C. turnovers proved costly.

Rookie quarterback Joe Paopao had three passes picked off, including a first-quarter toss which was returned 100 yards by cornerback Frank Dark for a touchdown. And fullback John Henry White coughed up the ball to end a third-quarter rally. Ken McEachern intercepted a Papao toss in the end zone in the second quarter and the final turnover came late in the game when defensive end Joe Moreino deflected a pass to middle linebacker Roger Goree.

Veteran Jim Young scored B.C.'s only touchdown when he gathered in a pass from backup quarterback Mike Nott and raced 85 yards for the 65th six-pointer of his career. Young, who has caught 522 passes since joining the Lions in 1967, is third on the CFL all-time list and he's tied with Bobby Simpson of Ottawa Rough Riders for second place in touchdown receptions.

And B.C. running-back Larry Key went over the 1,000-yard mark for the second straight season when he dashed 80 yards on 12 carries.

The Lion defence, beaten late in the game by Ottawa and Calgary earlier this month, allowed only one touchdown, a nine-yard toss from rookie Dan Sanders to Joey Walters in the fourth quarter. Rookie Reg Boudoreau, subbing for the injured Bob Macoritti, booted four field goals and two conversions.

Lions also suffered a setback when tight-end Harry Holt was wheeled off the field on a stretcher after suffering an injury to his lower back. Holt, who was tackled by cornerback Steve Dennis, remains in a Regina hospital and is beginning to lose the feeling of numbness in his legs.

Lions finish schedule play Saturday night when Edmonton visits Empire Stadium.

In Edmonton, Eskimo quarterback Tom Wilkinson was shaken up in the first half and replaced by sophomore Warren Moon. Wilkinson had completed a touchdown toss to Waddell Smith and the other Edmonton points were added by kickers Dave Cutler, who had three field goals and a single, and Hank Ilesic, who had two singles.

Walt Passaglia caught a touchdown pass from Dieter Brock for the only Winnipeg touchdown, a nine-yard toss from rookie Dan Sanders to Joey Walters in the fourth quarter. Rookie Reg Bouwith a field goal, single and conversion.

Bombers finished their 16-game season with a 4-12 mark.

Eskimos the defending Grey Cup champions, have home-field advantage for the WFC final on Sunday, Nov. 18.

At Toronto, the Argonauts, who have made the EFC playoffs only once in the last six years, appeared in the game during the first half and trailed by a single point as Calgary took a 13-12 lead into the final 30 minutes.

But quarterback Ken Johnson led the Stampeders to two second-half touchdowns and the defence shut the doors on Toronto to assure Calgary second place in the WFC with 22 points on 11 wins and four losses.

Toronto, 5-10, can still finish in a tie for third place with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, 6-9. But the Ticats would get the last EFC playoff spot on a better point difference in head-to-head encounters.

Running-backs James Sykes and Willie Burden plunged over for Calgary touchdowns and Johnson combined with Willie Armstead for a 20-yard touchdown strike.

Terry Metcalf scored the only Toronto touchdown, gathering in an eight-yard pass from quarterback Tony Adams.

Vikettes convincing in Calgary tourney

University of Victoria Vikettes will have championship status for the Canadian intercollegiate women's field hockey championships starting Thursday on McCoy field.

The Vikettes qualified automatically as the host team but they made it clear they deserved to be there by going unbeaten in the Canada West University Athletic Association championships which ended Sunday at Calgary.

Both UVic and Alberta took unbeaten records into their final match and the Vikettes emerged with a 2-0 victory on goals by Susan Taylor and Cynthia McAlpine.

Alberta finished second and gets the CWUAA berth in the seven-team, national tournament.

Vikettes defeated UBC 1-0 and Saskatchewan 2-0 on Saturday and then trounced Calgary 7-0 Sunday. Carrie Crookshank and Taylor, who scored in every game, scored twice each against Calgary and Cindy Bray, Mary Cavin and Sarah Angus counted once each.

Play in the national tournament begins at 8:30 a.m. on McCoy field. The final is slated for 11 a.m. Sunday.

Carmichael set for favorite spiel

Gord Carmichael of Victoria Curling Club is looking to make it three in a row in the richest Juan de Fuca men's cashspiel ever.

The defending champion leads a field of 60 of Vancouver Island's top rinks in the chase for a share of the $3,500 in prize money, which starts Wednesday.

That's more than double last year when $1,700 in prizes were awarded.

The prize money for the main draw is $3,000 but the four event winners will play off for an additional $500.

Barry Harvey and Bob Gallaugher of Playland, Tim Horrigan of the Racquet Club and newcomers Ralph Kitchen and John McGowan of the Racquet Club are among those expected to challenge Carmichael's supremacy.

Unbeaten Wests top Vikings

University of Victoria Vikings started their own downfall Sunday and left Victoria West the only unbeaten team in the first division of the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

After the two previously-unbeaten squads battled through a scoreless first half at Centennial Stadium, Vikings put the ball in their own net at 56 minutes and Vic West went on to a 3-0 victory. Dan Henry scored the 2-0 goal at 67 minutes and Steve Forslund finished things off at 79 minutes. Vic West is 6-0-0 and has a five-point lead over the Vikings, Powell River Villas and Gorge.

Powell River edged visiting Castaways 2-1 and Gorge topped Nanaimo United by the same score at Hampton Park. Meston's Auto Body and Oak Bay played to a scoreless draw at Heywood Avenue Park.

Phil Galigos and Lorne Harry scored for the Villas and Robert Guitierrez relied for Castaways.

Dan Hood of Nanaimo and Yosu Iruretagoyena of Gorge traded goals in the first half and Howie Kirk scored the winner at 55 minutes on a pass from Mike Collis.

Steve Akam of Oak Bay and Carlos Almeida of Meston's posted the shutouts.

Nordiques credit fans after upset win

AWAITING TEST RESULTS, centre Doug Risebrough of Montreal Canadiens tries to relax on hospital bed Monday as doctors seek to determine extent of knee injury suffered in Sunday game against Quebec Nordiques.

"This is my greatest thrill in eight years of professional hockey."

So said coach Jacques Demers following the Quebec Nordiques stunning 5-4 Sunday victory over Montreal Canadiens in a National Hockey League game played before a standing room only crowd of 11,908 at the Colisee in Quebec City.

In other games: Hartford Whalers played to a 2-2 tie with the Rangers at New York; Washington Capitals downed the Oilers 6-4 in Edmonton; Philadelphia Flyers edged visiting Detroit Red Wings 5-4; St. Louis Blues tied the Jets 2-2 at Winnipeg; Buffalo Sabres beat Colorado Rockies 4-2 at Buffalo; and Boston Bruins downed the Black Hawks 4-1 at Chicago.

Demers credited the tremendous fan support given the Nordiques for helping them pull off the victory over the Stanley Cup champions in only the second meeting between the two teams.

"The fans really helped us to get excited. They really got us into the game. It feels great to play in front of a full house and an appreciative audience."

The delirious fans cheered lustily throughout the contest, littered the ice with confetti with each Quebec goal and gave the Nordiques a 15-minute ovation at game's end.

"An expansion team has never played as well as we did tonight." concluded Demers.

Quebec, one of four teams accepted into the NHL from the World Hockey Association this year, lost 3-1 to the Canadiens earlier at Montreal.

The Nordiques had the lead early Sunday but had to rally for the win.

Richard Leduc gave Quebec a 1-0 lead with the only goal of the first period but Pierre Mondou and Steve Shutt made it 2-1 Montreal by the midway mark of the second period.

Real Cloutier and Dale Hoganson sandwiched goals around one by Doug Risebrough and the second period ended tied 3-3.

Risebrough suffered strained knee ligaments later in the game when he collided with Quebec defenceman Barry Legge. He underwent exploratory surgery and will be out of action for three weeks.

Pierre Plante put Quebec ahead at 10:48 of the third period and Jaimie Hislop made it 5-3 less than five minutes later.

Mario Tremblay got Montreal to within a goal at 18:57 but Michel Dion, who stopped 23 shots to 20 for Bunny Larocque of Montreal, blanked the Canadiens in the final minute.

Larry Robinson praised the Nordiques.

"Whenever a team can go back, take control and pass the puck up to the wings, they certainly are doing something right." said the big Montreal defenceman.

The win was the third in eight games for the Nordiques who trail the Adams Division with seven points.

Montreal is 6-2-1 and first in the Norris Division.

At New York, defenceman Al Sims continued to provide dividends for the Whalers.

Acquired from Boston in the expansion draft, Sims, who has scored two tying goals this season, scored once and set up the tying goal by Jordy Douglas.

New York had led 2-0 on goals by Ron Duguay and Ulf Nilsson.

The Capitals' win snapped a losing streak at four games.

"Tonight we were the experienced club," said Capitals coach Danny Belisle following the win over the expansion Oilers. "We're young and we had a lot of injuries but we were up against Edmonton."

Victoria team reaches final

BELLEVUE, Wash. — Avis Scorpions of Victoria had to settle for second place in the Bellevue men's senior "A" volleyball tournament Sunday.

Scorpions reached the final with a 15-4, 15-8 whipping of Missoula, Mont., but then lost 15-7, 15-12 to Evergreen State College.

At Philadelphia, Reggie Leach scored the winning goal with a minute remaining to cap a four-goal third period by the Flyers.

Detroit netminder Rogatien Vachon was brilliant through the first two periods and most of the third period.

The Flyers, who have 15 wins and three ties in their last 18 home games against Detroit, outshot the Red Wings 48-20.

There were no games Monday but play resumes tonight with Colorado at Atlanta, Montreal at Washington, Edmonton at St. Louis and Boston facing the Kings at Los Angeles.

The Kings are 5-3-1 and their star centre Marcel Dionne is off to the fastest scoring start in league history.

Dionne has 25 points (nine goals) in his first nine games. The best previous start was 24 points in nine games by Guy Lafleur of Montreal in October 1975.

Killanin directs appeal to Britain

TOKYO (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, appealed to British rugby union officials Monday to think carefully before making sporting contacts with South Africa.

Black African countries have said they will demand Britain's expulsion from the 1980 Olympic Games if the British Lions rugby team goes ahead with a projected tour of South Africa.

Killanin said at a luncheon at the Japan National Press Club in Tokyo the IOC had no control over rugby, which is not an Olympic sport.

But the added: "I would make an appeal to all those responsible to look very carefully at their actions."

Then, in an obvious reference to the African countries, Killanin said: "I hope that all pressure groups which feel concern about this do not make any athletes the victims of the misjudgments and mistakes of others, so that all eligible athletes can compete in the Games at Lake Placid and Moscow next year."

IOC leaders fear a disruption of the Moscow Games similar to that which undermined Montreal in 1976. Twenty-six African countries boycotted the Montreal Games at short notice because a New Zealand rugby team made a tour of South Africa.

Killanin moved earlier this year and helped to head off a tour of France by a South African rugby team. He was in a position to do this because the French Rugby Federation is affiliated to the French National Olympic Association.

The French tour eventually was called off by order of the French government.

UVic hoop clubs trim opposition

University of Victoria Vikettes and Vikings scored exhibition basketball victories Sunday.

Carol Loos scored 19 points to lead the Vikettes to a 72-44 pounding of Alberta Pandas in the final of the intercollegiate women's Panda tournament at Edmonton while the Vikings, who trimmed Good Time Charlies of Vancouver 101-71 Saturday, completed a weekend sweep with a 112-82 win over Gary Taylor's Players of Vancouver at UVic.

Luanne Hebb, who along with Loos is a member of the Canadian national team, contributed 14 points to the Vikette attack along with junior national Donna Digby.

The Vikettes, unbeaten in four games, had gained the final with a 54-46 decision over Calgary Dinnies while Alberta advanced by edging Saskatchewan Huskiettes 62-60.

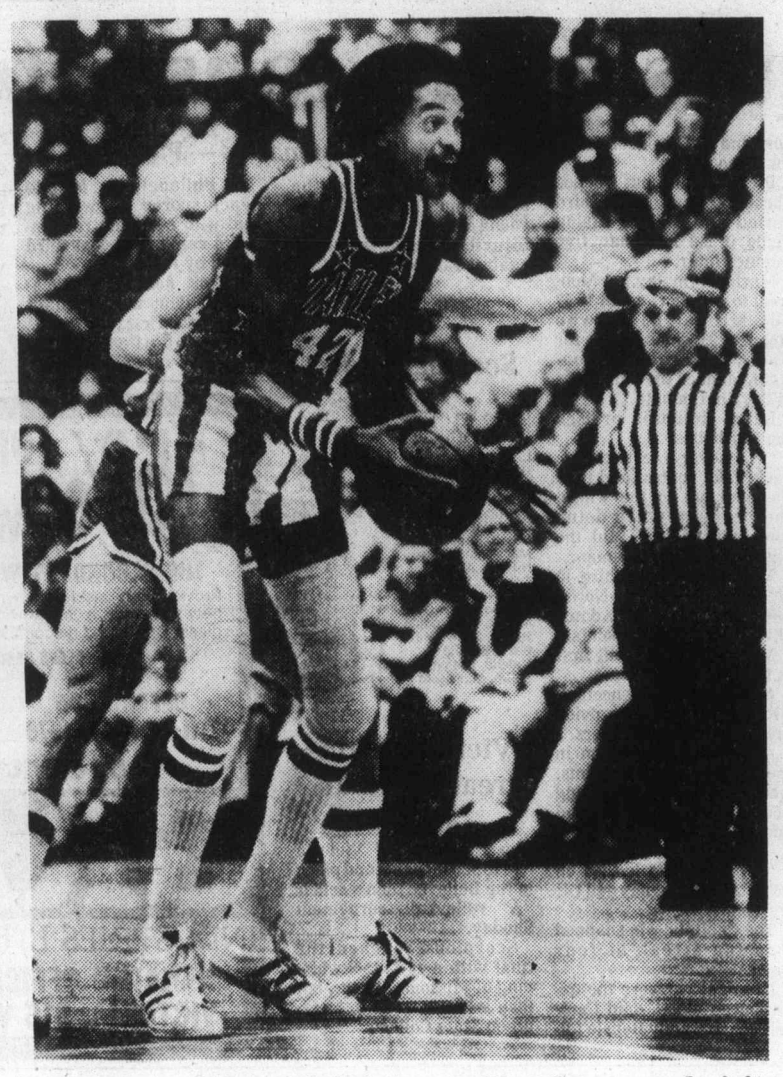
Bill Loos, Carol's husband, scored 24 points to top the Vikings while Kelly Dukeshire added 18 points and Gerald Kazanowski scored 12.

Larry Street scored 24 points for Taylor's and Gary Emmerson added 15 points.

Taylor's were bolstered by former Viking all-star Robbie Parris. Now a guard in the Victoria Senior "B" League, Parris scored eight points.

Detroit recalls defensive back

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions have resigned defensive-back Dave Parkin, a 6-foot, 190-pounder from Utah State who played on the Lions' special teams in four National Football League games who was just released last week by the club.



Trotters at Memorial Arena Friday for annual visit

He may not be as well known yet as Goose Tatum, Meadowlark Lemon or Hubie Ausbie but Twiggy Sanders is one of the new young talents with Harlem Globetrotters and he is working on it. Sanders made a big impression during his visit to Victoria a year ago and he'll be back Friday night at Memorial Arena with the show which always a family favorite...and the Trotters will be accompanied, as usual, but several novelty acts. Show time is 8 p.m.

Kelly loses appeal

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Hockey player John Paul Kelly lost a bid in county court Monday to have his court-ordered suspension from league games shortened.

Judge D.B. Hinds rejected a appeal by Kelly, captain last year of the New Westminster Bruins of the Western Hockey League, which claimed that a conditional discharge on an assault charge handed down in August was hurting him more than it was six other players who pleaded guilty to the same offence.

Kelly and the other players pleaded guilty to common assault after a brawl last March 22 in a game with the Portland Winter Hawks. As punishment, the players were forbidden to play in league games until Dec. 1.

Kelly's lawyer argued that Kelly has in effect received a harsher penalty than his former teammates because he has been drafted to play with Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League and is the only player of the seven considered likely to have a chance in the league this year.

The lawyer, Jerry Pettenuzzo, said the sentence prevented Kelly from earning almost $10,000 playing for the Kings.

Kings' general manager George Maguire said Kelly "played and conducted himself well" during the exhibition season but added that the assault sentence placed him at an extreme disadvantage.

The 19-year-old was selected third by the Kings in the NHL's draft. One other of the Bruins, Boris Fistric, 18, was selected by Detroit Red Wings in the draft but returned to the Bruins as an under-age player.

In their arguments before provincial court Judge J.K. Shaw at the earlier trial, both Pettenuzzo and prosecutor John Bethel said that because the brawl was "a team altercation" no one defendant should suffer a penalty greater than the others.

Judge Shaw accepted the lawyers' argument and gave all seven players the same sentence.

Judge Shaw gave the seven a tongue-lashing for their actions in the brawl and also blamed management for inciting the players to violence. During the trial, Kelly and Fistric admitted assaulting Portland coach Ken Hodge. Two Portland players were beaten.

He ordered the suspensions after declaring a prison term would be too harsh a sentence.

Halfway point at Sandown marked by top win prices

By JIM TANG

● Monday's Form Chart — P. 21

There had been more than a few unexpected results in the first seven days but Monday at Sandown Park marked the half-way point of the 16-day thoroughbred meeting with its two biggest win prices.

Little could be more unlikely at any race track than what happened in the first race, but the featured seventh more than matched it.

There wasn't much, it is true, in the first race but the four-year-old Star Of Merit had started only three times, the last time, and the only time this year, on April 16 at Exhibition Park. It was beaten 32 lengths in that one, a figure to go with the 21 and 17 lengths which separated the maiden from the winners in two 1978 starts.

Off that, and the presence in the irons of Judy Carrier, riding only her second Sandown race, Star Of Merit seemed like an underlay at odds of almost 24-1. But the fast-away Sonoita Dol was disposed of early, and Star Of Merit looked like a winner from the time it challenged for the lead.

The win price of $49.30 lasted as the meet high only until the feature heat, when Fast Gambler raked in the win share of the pot and rewarded backers with a truly amazing $58.70 payoff.

Fast Gambler had competed with honor at the $5,000 level at Exhibition Park and while it had been against cheaper, had run well in both Sandown starts this year.

Credentials, on a comparative basis, were far superior to those of Star Of Merit, but what really made the $58.70 payoff a shocker was that it came in a five-horse race.

There were double-figure win prices in the second and third races and a $114.20 Exactor in the eighth when the 21-1 Proliner finished second, by a nose, to favored Decour, but any opinion that there is no form this year at Sandown is in error.

Despite a racing strip that has presented varying degrees of wetness since being rated fast on opening day, favorites are getting their normal share of the loot. When Decour had won the camera verdict in Monday's last race, the records showed that after 66 races, 22 mutuel favorites had made it to the wire first and that 30 others had either placed (14) or showed (16).

Even-money Second Identity and odds-on High And Outside and Fielder Frank were also there first to balance it out Monday.

BREAKAGE: Attendance was boosted to 1,500 Monday by 633 fans who presented losing lottery tickets...the mutuel handle of $109,985 was one of the best of the meet on a comparative basis with the same day in 1978...the Vancouver Island Derby, scheduled Saturday, has seven nominations — Power Cell, Gallant Purchase, True Multi, Sultans Command, C Leave, Garfield and Shy Shot...claimed Monday, for $3,200 by trainer Wayne Isbister, was the four-year-old Hobos Lass...eight first-time starters Monday brought the number of horse which have gone to the post at least once to 232...

Canadian pros collect with second-place finishes

Pro golf roundup

Miller
. . . with Lancome cheque

Canadian golfers enjoyed substantial paydays in both men's and women's U.S. pro tournaments Sunday.

Dan Halldorson of Brandon and U.S. partner Scott Bess teamed for a final round of 10-under-par 62 and a share of second place money in the $250,000 National Team golf tournament at Disney World in Florida while Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., carded a final round 71 and finished second in the $110,000 Far East Women's Invitatinal tournament.

Halldorson and Bess went into the final round tied for sixth place, six strokes behind leaders Ben Crenshaw and George Burns.

Crenshaw-Burns finished with 65 and a three-stroke victory while Bess-Halldorson tied with the teams of Jeff Hewes and Sammy Racels and Peter Jacobsen and D. A. Weibring.

Burns and Crenshaw picked up cheques for $22,500 while each of the second-place players earned $10,500.

It was the biggest payday yet for Halldorson who is completing his second full season on the U.S. tour.

Dave Barr of Kelowna and partner Ed Fiori shot a final round of 65 for 264 and $1,700 each while Jim Nelford of Burnaby and partner Pat McGowan shot 68 for 266 and $960 each.

Post picked up $10,780 as she finished two strokes behind Silvia Bertolaccini of Argentina.

Bertolaccini, who won $16,500 for her 54-hole score of 213, broke a tie with Post by scoring birdies on the 16th and 17th holes.

Meanwhile, Lanny Wadkins was a big winner in Japan and Johnny Miller won in France for his first tournament victory in nearly three years.

Wadkins shot a final round 71 for a 72-hole total of 11-under-par 277 and a one-stroke victory over Yoshikazu Yokoshima in the $130,000 tournament.

Miller also shot 71 as he beat 11 other international champions in the 10th Lancome Trophy Invitational Tournament at Saint-Nom-La-Breteche.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

In a recent column we discussed the potting up of hyacinth bulbs to bring a touch of spring into the home through the darkest days of winter.

As far as I can find out, the first man to attempt the indoor culture of this Turkish bulb was a Martin Triewald, "director of mechanics to the King of Sweden."

Triewald didn't have much luck at first, but by trial and error he got the hang of it eventually and was able to "supply the curious ladies with nose-gays to adorn their bosoms at Christmas."

One question that always crops up around the time when potted hyacinths come into bloom is whether the bulbs can be saved and grown again indoors the following year. Well, it HAS been done, but I doubt very much whether it is worth the effort.

You see, the bulbs have to get themselves plumped up again after flowering, and this means nursing the plants along for several months in a sunny window until the foliage dies down naturally. During all this time, the pots are occupying precious windowsill space, and with nothing to look at but plain green leaves. Weather permitting, though, the plants may be knocked out of their pot and planted outdoors where, with any luck, they will bloom again in the spring of 1981.

Before you go shopping for hyacinth bulbs, it would be wise to check up on what containers you have available for potting them, and plan your purchases accordingly. The common 3½ inch to 4 inch clay or plastic pot won't take more than one bulb, making a rather meagre display, but the shorter, wider "squatty" flower pots known as bulb pans will hold from three to five bulbs, according to size.

Hyacinths can be grown in ornamental porcelain or china bowls, too, but I think I'll leave this subject for another day.

One point I must mention, though. It is very important, when potting hyacinths, not to mix your varieties in any one container. If you were to plant, say, a pink, a white and a blue hyacinth all in one pot, they would come into bloom at different times.

The white flower would probably be just about finished and starting to turn brown before the blue one opened its florets, and at no time would you have a really eye-catching display.

On the other hand, if you were to plant up a container with three Pink Pearl bulbs or three L'Innocence whites, they would all commence flowering at the same time, making a much more satisfactory effect.

Hyacinths are not the only bulbs which can be potted up for indoor blooming, of course, and I don't think the winter scene could be considered complete without at least a few pots of tulips.

Here again, some kinds are much better suited for indoor culture than others. Long-stemmed tulips are grand for the outdoor garden and for cutting, but it is important, in selecting tulip bulbs for indoor culture, to stay with the short-stemmed kinds, for the tall ones grow even taller and floppier under indoor conditions.

The type known as the Single Earlies are about the right proportions for pot culture, and of these, one of my favorits is General De Wet, a glorious orange flower suffused with gold, and reputed to be the most fragrant of tulips.

Belona is a good yellow, only 15 inches tall and sweetly scented. Christmas Marvel is a cherry pink and very early; in fact, it has been forced into bloom in time for Christmas, hence the name. Prince of Austria is a brilliant scarlet with just a suggestion of orange, creating a sparkling effect.

The Double Early tulips, to my mind, lack the delicacy and refinement of the singles, with blooms more closely resembling a full-blown rose than the chaste goblet shape of the singles. Against this, the doubles remain in bloom somewhat longer, and are usually more fragrant.

Of the doubles, I recommend for indoor culture William of Orange, a soft orange shade flushed with a coppery red; Mme. Testout, deep pink; Goya, a very showy salmon red with a yellow base; and Hytuna, fairly new, in a deep butter yellow shade.

Jack Smith

We have just returned from an exploration of Great Britain, a long-awaited adventure whose beginning was such a misadventure that we almost didn't get away at all.

We had never been to Britain, though it is the land of my roots, and of all cities in the world London was the one I most wanted to see; but our hopes seemed to have been jinxed in recent years by one piece of bad luck after another.

So I had almost a feeling of inevitability when we checked in at the British Airways counter in Los Angeles and discovered that we didn't have my wife's passport. I was to carry them both, thinking my passport wallet would be safer than her purse. I went through the wallet and all my pockets, twice, dismayed by the growing certainty that I had left it behind.

"Try again, slowly," said the airline man.

"No. I don't have it."

"I can't let her go without it," he said gently. "How far away do you live?"

"Downtown. Highland Park. Twenty, 25 miles. Each way."

He shook his head. "That's pretty far."

I didn't even have my car. We had left it at our son's house and taken a cab to the airport. "You wait here," I told my wife. "I'll go in a cab."

Then I realized I didn't have any money to pay a cab driver. I had already changed my dollars into English pounds. My wife gave me all she had—only $30. I hurried outside. There was no cab at the curb. I went out into the street and stopped one by standing in front of it. "Are you free?" I asked the driver.

He was not eager. "Where to?"

"Downtown. Five miles beyond. And back. If you can do it in an hour."

I don't know whether it was the challenge of driving 50 miles through Los Angeles traffic in an hour, or the prospect of a big fare and a big tip, but he said, "Get in."

I got in the front seat beside him and he started out with a smooth but thrilling acceleration that gave me hope I had chanced upon the right man. By the time we were onto the freeway I was thinking we could really make it. He was not going over the speed limit—not my much, anyway, I hoped—but he seemed to have an uncanny eye for the holes that opened up in the traffic ahead of us, as if he could estimate the speed and anticipate the moves of every other car in sight.

"You're a good driver," I told him.

But a few minutes later I checked my watch and guessed at the number of miles yet to go and decided it was hopeless. We would have to hold at our present speed, and there were too many uncertainties ahead.

"We aren't going to make it," I said. "No way."

"You know what you said? I am a good driver. We going to make it."

Suddenly a new anxiety shook me. By the meter, I could see that my $30 was going to fall far short of the fare, whether we made it or not. All I had was travellers cheques in $100 denominations, and I didn't know whether a taxi driver would take a $100 travellers cheque. I had to give him some extra motive.

"If we make it in an hour," I said, "I'll give you a 50 per cent bonus.

He didn't answer for a moment, but he seemed to accelerate a bit. Then, "Those Angels," he said, "they be all right if they quit thinking about the other guys and just play ball."

"Right," I said with finality. I didn't want to encourage baseball talk and distract him from his driving.

"The smallest cheque I have is for $100," I said. "If you don't have the change you can mail it to me."

I directed him off the freeway and up the hill to our house. I ran inside and found the passport where I hoped it would be. We started back. I checked my watch—we had used only 27 minutes. When we were halfway back, and my confidence was rising to his, I signed a travellers cheque and handed it to him.

"How much change you want?" he said. "The fare will be $44." I figured it out and told him, including the promised bonus. He reached into his hip pocket for his wallet and counted out $34 without slowing down.

When we pulled up in front of British Airways we had been gone just one minute short of an hour.

"You know what I liked?' the driver said. "When you said you'd trust me to send you the change."

You never know what will push a man to give you his best.

"You made it!" said the man at the counter, looking as astonished as I was. I showed him the passport and he gave me our boarding passes and said my wife was waiting in the ready room. The concourse and the escalator ride seemed endless. Her eyes were on the door when I pushed it open. I don't believe she had ever been happier to see me since the day I showed up for our wedding.

We were no sooner airborne than a stewardess who looked and spoke like Maggie Smith came by with a cocktail trolley, and I knew that, at last, we were off to the land of kings and poets and my ancestors.

according to GUINNESS

The smallest airplane ever flown is the Stits Skybaby biplane. It was 9 feet 10 inches long, with a wing span of 7 feet 2 inches, and weighed 452 lbs. empty. It had a top speed of 185 m.p.h.

Things I Learned En route to Looking Up Other Things:

● That the famous Rothschild dynasty in Europe found a way to keep the fortune in the family: fully half of the 58 marriages by the descendants of the founder were between first cousins. (The other half were between unrelated couples.)

● That seals purposely swallow pebbles which they use to crush food in their stomach by contracting their stomach muscles. (So might you if you lived mostly on shellfish.)

● That only because Pope Felix IV begot children did the church have Gregory the Great, who led in the spread of Christianity in Europe.

● That it is not illegal for a tennis player to use a racquet head as large as a door, or a handle as long as a broomstick. (Only the stringing, not the shape or size of the racquet, is prescribed.)

● That the Kadars in Kerala, a province of India, are possibly the last remaining human tribe that can hunt by scent alone.

● That Lenin's four grandparents were of four races and religions.

● That sodium, a corrosive metal which burns on contact with water, and chlorine, which is a deadly poisonous gas, when combined give us—a grain of salt.

● That the American "robin" is not a robin at all, but a kind of thrush. (The true robin is a smaller bird, occurring in Europe.)

● That in the North Sea, where the total water depth seldom exceeds 150 feet, the maximum wave height attains an incredible 50 feet. (Oil-drilling rigs there must be designed to withstand storms that can produce waves up to 100 feet high and winds of 150 m.p.h.)

● That although Japan has a land area half as big again as that of the United Kingdom, only 15 per cent of this is suitable for farming, housing, and industrial development.

● That there is no fish called a "sardine," except in the can; what we call sardines are any of the small fish belonging to the herring family, such as pilchard and sprat.

● That the fantastic consumption of "ammunition" used by archers before firearms were invented is typified by the Parthian army who massacred the Romans at Carrhae—the 10,000 Parthian horse-archers were accompanied by 1,000 camels carrying nothing but spare arrows.

● That the Italian sculptor, Bernini, studied his reflection in a mirror while burning his own leg in order to be able realistically to portray the martyrdom of Saint Lawrence.

● That a bucking horse does not arch its back when trying to dismount its rider; the back remains absolutely straight, but the effect is given by the upward drive of all four legs together, and the lowering of the hindquarters. (A horse, by the way, has no collarbone.)

Farmers regain football crown

Oak Bay Farmer Construction is back on top after a five-year hiatus.

First-place finisher in the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League, Oak Bay captured the playoff title for the first time since 1974 by defeating defending champion Saanich Hornets 18-6 Sunday at Royal Athletic Park.

Oak Bay will now try to regain the provincial championship it also won in 1974.

The date for this year's title game has yet to be set but Oak Bay will face the winner of a game between Richmond Raiders and Vancouver Meralomas.

Oak Bay beat the Meralomas 16-7 in the 1974 provincial final but then lost 18-0 to Laval, Que. in the national final.

Mark Edgington made the big play early for Farmer Sunday as he broke through for a spectacular 70-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage.

Dave Morrison kicked the convert and later added a single as Oak Bay took an 8-0 lead in the first quarter and Dave Marcussen kicked a single in the second quarter to make it 9-0.

Oak Bay went ahead 17-0 in the third quarter with Steve Percival running 60 yards for a touchdown and quarterback Terry Jones passing to Marcussen for a two-point conversion.

Morrison supplied another single in the fourth quarter and the tough Oak Bay defence held Saanich scoreless until Andy Maxwell passed to Jeff Bray for a touchdown with about three minutes remaining.

The league's individual awards were also presented Sunday with Jones and Hornet quarterback Mark Townsend sharing most valuable player honors.

Other winners were: most valuable backs, Edgington, and Robin Mayo of Cowichan; outstanding players, Tom Graham of Hornets and Eric Iverson of Oak Bay; most valuable lineman, Geordie Dagg of Oak Bay; coach-of-the-year, Fraser Yule of Nanaimo.

A helicopter lowers an ingenious collecting rake to the tree tops where the healthiest cones grow. They contain seeds that should grow into bigger, better trees to assure forest crops, and jobs, for the next generation.

Dear Landlord:

Over 90% of Canada's forests are owned by the Canadian public—you. In addition to taxes, the forest industry people pay governments for every cubic foot of wood they harvest. And they pay rent for the land they lease. A part of those payments is earmarked for forest regeneration. Is enough being invested to assure future wood supplies? One job in ten in Canada depends on the forest.

Yes, the forests of Canada are still growing more wood than is being used. But the gap is closing. We're closer than we used to be to what foresters call the annual allowable cut.

Further, only half of Canada's natural forests are productive enough for regular harvesting. Some grow in impenetrable country. Some are too far from the mills.

Predictions say the world's appetite for pulp and paper products will double in a generation. If Canada can help to feed that demand, it will mean more jobs, more exports. To grow with demand, Canada must assure continuous forest crops that can be harvested at a reasonable cost. We must also grow bigger crops. That's why forestry programmes are being stepped up all across the country.

A surprising number of Canadians are unaware that they own over 90% of Canada's forest lands and crops. All the wood cut on public land is measured and forest products companies pay for every single cubic foot of wood they use. Besides this, they pay rent for the use of your public land. They also share costs with the provinces to protect your forests from fire, insect, and disease damage. Forest products companies pay taxes; their employees pay taxes. Last year, in wood payments, land rent and taxes, forest industries paid their governments nearly a billion dollars. Their employees paid another billion dollars in taxes.

The care and tending of forests can create jobs for men and women. Some forests need thinning or fertilizing to produce better trees. Harvested areas sometimes need scuffing up to make a good seed bed. Hundreds of millions of seedlings must be planted annually. Each year, around a million acres need this special care to guarantee future crops.

A portion of these funds is set aside to help maintain Canada's great public natural resource. In government forestry departments and in the industry itself, there is growing concern that the investment may not be enough to ensure adequate wood supplies. So attention is turning increasingly to silviculture to produce bigger and better wood crops for the future.

Our forest products bring in more money than any other export, create one out of every ten jobs in Canada.

Senator got share for help—witness

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal Senator Louis Giguere was given a one-quarter interest in a holding company in return for the use of his political influence in getting government contracts for an advertising firm that company controlled, a witness at the senator's trial testified Monday.

Leon Simard, a former official with the Canadian Advertising Agency Ltd. and its holding company, Publicor Ltd., told Mr. Justice Jean-Marc Labrosse of the Ontario Supreme Court that he and two other businessmen agreed to take personal responsibility for the companies when they took a 25-per-cent interest in Publicor in 1965.

Giguere, he said, was also given a 25-per-cent interest in Publicor but was not required to sign for a $100,000 overdraft the company owed, or otherwise commit himself financially.

"Giguere's role was to bring, through his connections and contacts, work from the federal government in the advertising field," Simard told the court.

The senator and the two Quebec businessmen, David Belhumeur and Jean Dionne, are charged with conspiring to have Giguere accept an $87,000 benefit "in consideration for co-operation, assistance and the exercise of influence" in obtaining government ad contracts.

Simard's name appears on the indictment, which covers a nine-year period from Jan. 1, 1965, to Dec. 31, 1973, but he is not charged.

He was the first witness called by Crown prosecutor Rod McLeod when the trial opened Monday.

Giguere, a federal Liberal party organizer in Quebec, was a director of the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. until he was appointed to the Senate in 1968 by former prime minister Pierre Trudeau.

Simard said he and Dionne were also supposed to bring Canadian Advertising contracts through their various connections with the business community.

When asked by McLeod why they — but not Giguere — took responsibility for the overdraft, Simard replied that the work the senator was bringing the company was "in proportion to the guarantees we were giving at the bank."

Witness sobs during bus trial

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — One of seven survivors of the bus crash that killed 40 persons in August, 1978, fought to maintain his composure Monday as he told how he sat perched in darkness on the roof of the bus as lake water seeped inside and drowned most of the handicapped passengers.

Maurice Paquette, 54, a school caretaker from Trois-Lacs, Que., stopped several times to wipe his eyes and choke back tears as he testified on the first day of the criminal negligence trial of Gilles Bolduc.

Bolduc, 37, owned the bus which plunged into the lake after a harrowing midnight descent along a steep road. He is charged with causing the death of Bernadette Proulx, whose body was the first plucked out of Lac d'Argent, 100 kilometres east of Montreal in the cottage community of Eastman, Que.

A coroner's inquest blamed the accident — the worst in Canadian road history — on a faulty braking system.

Bolduc is being tried before Mr. Justice Jean-Louis Peloquin and a Quebec Superior Court jury of seven men and five women.

Paquette testified the bus began gaining speed as soon as it started down the steep road leading away from the hillside summer theatre where 40 mentally- and physically-handicapped persons and their seven escorts from the Asbestos, Que. area spent the evening of Aug. 4, 1978.

He said the passengers were rocked from side to side as the bus negotiated the twisting road. He estimated the bus was travelling at 60 miles an hour when it reached the foot of the hill, missed a turn and passed over the beach on its way into the water.

"There was a boom when we hit the water," he said. "Everyone was screaming.

"The water made the bus slow down a bit, but we continued to slide like a boat for five or six minutes."

Paquette said calm descended over the passengers once the bus came to a halt. After about 12 minutes, he began to feel water around his feet.

"I cimbed onto the roof alone, then the back of the bus started to lift. I was thrown back into the water.

"My wife was in the back seat," he moaned, sobbing and bent almost double over the rail of the witness box. His wife had died in the accident.

Paquette said he swam to shore and screamed for help to people who had begun to assemble with flashlights around a number of small boats.

Earlier, Quebec provincial policeman Alain Perron, the first officer to arrive at the scene, testified that there were no skid marks to indicate that the bus had attempted to brake on the road.

Ski image

Fabrics rule roost over color mixes

By MARILYN THELAN
Colonist-Monitor Service

PORTLAND, ORE.—Skiers will play the "Match Game" on the slopes this fall, as sportswear's unyielding influence reshapes the look of skiwear.

The key word is cross-over. And that translates into multi-use clothing.

Skiwear season is designed to travel to and from the slopes, in and out of supermarkets—and even is appropriate for cycling, biking or hiking.

That's not to say skiwear loses integrity. Ski clothing still is manufactured for specific groups: basic skiers, social skiers, authentic skiers. Smart consumers will pinpoint their "image" and shop accordingly, since prices escalate by the mere inclusion of a status label.

Men's and women's ski clothing will take on a more conservative feeling this fall. Gone are the phosphorescence and the snappy red, white and blue patriotics.

In their place are parkas and pants in brown, navy, silver gray, khaki and black. Basics are blended with tonal trims. There's a strong trend toward monochromatic silhouettes with a little color added in touches of piping. Stripes are done in bands of colors that complement the basic fabric, or are woven into the fabric itself.

And fabric is news. The headliners are poplin and corduroy.

"Fabric combinations are more important than color combinations for fall '79," says Peter Bauer of White Stag. "We like combining quilted with flats or rough with smooths for new surface dimension." An example would be poplin with silky nylon.

And don't be limited by the generic descriptions of "poplin," "corduroy" or "taffeta." In skiwear, these fabrications are specifically engineered through blending, treating and weaving to achieve the waterproofing, stretching, insulating, and breathability that are required for functional use.

Wool is becoming more popular in blends, especially where stretch is important. Many stretch fabrics place the wool content inside, next to the body for extra warmth, using nylon outside to fend off the elements. Beconta boasts a four-way stretch fabric this year, composed of 30 per cent wool.

Down isn't creating a big wave this season. Synthetic blends have taken up the slack, and flatter needlepunch filling lends itself to slimmer stylings that are more popular than the puffy-type jackets of several seasons ago. If your ski jacket looks like a baseball jacket, you're wearing the No. 1 best seller.

Demetre is introducing AngoSport underwear, which the Olympic ski team will use. It is touted to be three times warmer than regular wool and seven times warmer than cotton. The 50 per cent angora wool and 50 per cent poly knit fabric is lightweight low bulk and available for men and women in one- and two-piece styling.

There's a lot of cross-country skiwear to choose from this season, too. And there seems to be an increasing understanding of what the cross-country skier needs.

A casual observer might suppose cross-country skiing to be akin to downhill. Wrong! It is similar to running, and skiers need lightweight stretch knits to do it comfortably. Beginners should shop carefully and avoid trendy ski-like apparel. Choose instead Lycra stretch clothes that can be layered on and off as you work up a sweat. Experts recommend shopping where a salesperson has had some cross-country experience.

This fall, apres-ski definitely requires a pair of cowboy boots, and the latest craze is knit leggings or gaiters to be worn over pantlegs on or off the slopes.

Versatility has men not bored and broke

By GUS STEVENS
Colonist-Copley Service

After a decade of violent change—from the gray flannel suit to the electric-blue disco shirt—men's fashions stand on the threshold of the 1980s.

The only thing that has been decided about the long-range trends in menswear is that nothing has been decided.

Taste in men's clothing is more fragmented than ever, which is a good deal for the customer, the guy who has to wear the dry goods turned out by the world's designers and manufacturers.

This means that nobody can point a finger at a man and tell him he's not wearing the "right" outfit for the occasion. Unless he shows up at his grandmother's funeral in something better suited for a date at an X-rated movie house.

Change has come over the years and, along the way, much of the junk has been discarded from menswear offerings. Doubtless more junk will be introduced—some in every season—but it doesn't last long.

Thus, in the search for something different from the button-down look of the 1960s, a lot of trash has been thrown out.

Among the casualties is the once popular double knit. Baseball players still are wearing double knits (you'll still see some double knits at a few stores at greatly reduced prices).

But the hard, plastic-looking all-polyester double knits which can be picked out in a crowd from a low-flying plane are falling from popularity at much speed.

Going or gone with them are leisure suits, which someday will be right up there with the Edsel, cranberries and the Nehru jacket as one of the losers of the postwar era.

Gone also are wide neckties and lapels that once threatened to force a man to tack so that he could make headway into the wind. Shirt collars have thinned, too.

Three-color shoes also have gone the way of the dodo bird and the Indian head penny, in favor of more quiet footwear and heels that aren't stacked so high.

Replacing these goodies are practical fabrics which have the look and feel of the real thing. Items like wool-blend suits and jackets, cotton-blend shirts and pants which do not need ironing and multi-blends such as flax, cotton, linen, silk and polyester.

Thus, the now popular natural nubby look appears very authentic.

Lapels and neckties have been slimmed to reduce flapping in the breeze. The change is subtle—in fractions of inches—but apparent when the old and new are seen side by side.

Versatility is everywhere, even in the business suit. Major firms such as Sears and Levi Strauss now are offering suit pieces separately, so that our man may choose his jacket, vest and pants as he wishes, also mixing and matching as he sees fit.

"It's kind of amazing that the menwswear industry has taken this long to latch onto the idea of separate components for men's suits," said Paul Rogers, a man who travels the world as Sears' chief menswear taste arbiter.

"After all, the idea isn't new. Separates have been a part of the women's sportswear scene since the early 1970s and then moved on to men's sportswear some years ago."

The mix and match suit always has been a bargain for the enterprising man. He can select a suit with a jacket, so that the jacket can double as a sportcoat to go with contrasting slacks.

Some firms are selling reversible vests to add to the variety.

Thus, we have versatility and less of a financial knock for the man who wants to be well dressed, but not bored or broke.

It's impossible to overestimate the importance of new fabrics in these style changes. They mean that men's clothing lasts longer looks better and that whoever does the family ironing doesn't have to spend nearly so many long hours over the steaming board.

The blended fabrics range from suits to slacks to sweaters to underwear and even to blue jeans.

The chemists at Levi Strauss have been doing things to their denim.

"We've developed a traditional-looking jean that feels like all cotton, but it's a blend," said Pat Gerber, a Levi person. "This means that the jean lasts longer than all cotton. We've even managed to make the blended jean fade and age just like its older cousin."

Who can deny that natural aging is real progress, whether in champagne or blue jeans?

Easy manners for either country or city living are shown by these styles. The checked brown/tan sport coat (left) is of 100 per cent cashmere styled with tailored shoulders, flap pockets and centre vent. Muted plaid (centre) in 100 per cent lamb's wool features natural-shoulder styling marked with flap pockets and centre vent. Brown donegal tweed vested suit (right) is of wool and polyester and is shaped with natural-shoulder lines, flapped patch pockets and suede elbow patches.

WEST IN!

TORONTO (CP) — There is nothing new about the stetson.

It's been around for 100 years but suddenly everybody wants to look like a cowboy.

"It seems that when a man puts on a western hat," says Michael McMillan, president of Biltmore Industries, Canada's largest supplier of men's hats, "it gives him a very strong masculine look."

The word is that disco is dying and country and western bars are taking over in the U.S., another reason why the cowboy hat may be so popular.

In Toronto, skiers who love hats are shopping early and buying stetsons with chin straps so they stay on as the skiers blaze down the trails.

The stetsons cost $35 to $85 and come in 18 different styles—among them, wide, narrow and curved brims, high, low, punched-in, square and rounded-off crowns.

Are men wearing hats more today than four years ago?

"Definitely," says MacMillan. "Hats fit in with their shorter hair styles and dressier clothes.

"The best sellers are casual fabric hats with the turned-down brim and soft walking caps such as a soft wool knit dress cap similar to the newsboy cap but a little smaller in shape."

MacMillan says the most popular colors are brown, camel and grey. There are a few off-whites and bone shades that sell well.

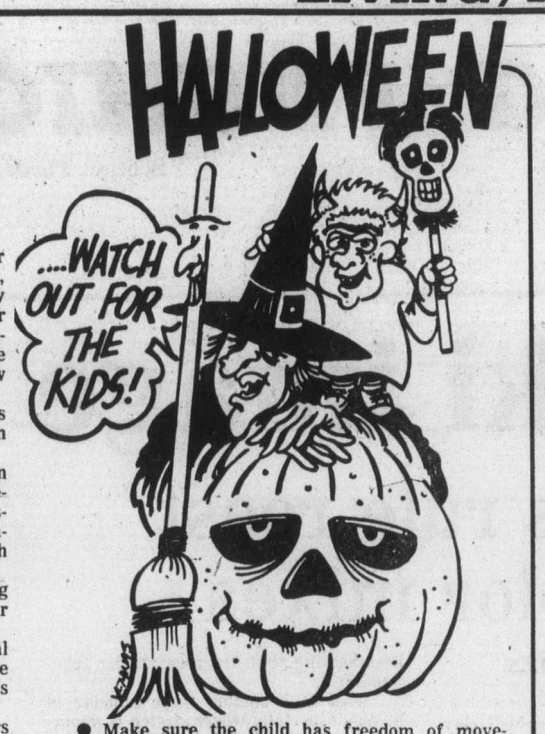
Colonist-Newsday Service

Before your small spooks scramble out the door this Halloween in search of goodies and gobblins, make sure they're well-apprised of some basic safety rules. It's a good idea to hold a briefing session a day or two before when children are more open to suggestions. . .rather than on Halloween night when they're anxious to join fellow trick-or-treaters. Here are a few suggestions:

- Encourage children to trick-or-treat with groups of friends in familiar neighborhoods. Younger children should be accompanied by adults or older children.
- It never hurts to repeat the obvious: when trick-or-treating, children should stay on the sidewalks and cross streets at intersections and crosswalks. They should be dressed warmly and comfortably, avoiding high-heeled or too-big shoes, which may lead to unnecessary mishaps.
- Give your children flashlights, never burning candles or jack-o'-lanterns, to help them find their way from door to door.
- Feed trick-or-treaters a hearty, nutritious meal before they leave on their rounds. This will limit the temptation to eat candy before they get home and it is subjected to parental inspection.

In addition, the National Safety Council offers these safety criteria for Halloween customes:

- Make sure costumes are flame-resistant, light-colored and include self-adhesive reflective tape.



- Make sure the child has freedom of movement to prevent tripping.
- Make sure the child can see peripherally. Masks that obstruct vision should not be worn.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My family has a horse-breeding farm in Virginia. We have all been fans of yours for a long time, and would like to name a horse after you, but we need to know if anyone has ever done it before.

Plese print this in your column with the answer. — Waiting With Bated Breath.

Dear Waiting: So far as I know, there have been two horses named after me — one in Edgerton, Wis., and another in Toronto. "Ann Landers" of Edgerton worked on a farm. My Toronto namesake was a three-year-old filly. She made her debut at Greenwood Raceway. As I recall, I was eased out of second place by Sailing Chance. Victoria Lomac came in first.

George Zirnis was my jockey. He said I had a poor position . . . a bum break. He also said I was just recovering from a bad cold.

So, there you have the background. If you decide to name that filly after me, let me know when and where she runs. I'd like to place a small bet — right on the nose.

Dear Ann Landers: Can you use one more letter about "choosing sides" in school and how it damages a child's self-image?

I still remember the pain of my grade-school days in the mid-'50s, when class tours were announced.

Our school had no bus, so the children volunteered their mothers to drive. Sounds OK? Well, the kids whose mothers drove got to invite five or six pals to ride in their car. Because of the size of the class, this always meant that 10 or 15 children didn't get to go.

My mother worked, and we didn't have a car. I wasn't popular and was rarely among those chosen. Although I am now 34 years old, I still remember the feeling of pain and rejection. I'm sorry to hear this type of thing is still going on. How cruel! — Been There.

Dear Been: I see your letter came from Des Moines. I cannot believe this sort of thing is still going on in that fine city.

If you will send me the name of the school and the principal I will contact him (or her) and speak in behalf of a more equitable system.

You did not sign your letter. Please sign the next one. You have my word that I will not reveal your identity.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son, 19, is in his second year of college. We are putting him through. The college is within walking distance of our home. Last year, when he was a freshman, he wanted his own apartment. We said OK, although my husband wasn't crazy about the idea. He shared a place with two other freshmen (nice boys). They all came here for dinner at least twice a week, which was OK.

Now our son wants to share an apartment with a girl he met three months ago. She is not a college student, but works as a waitress. We do not approve of this arrangement and refuse to underwrite a lifestyle we believe is immoral.

He claims we are hopelessly out of date, punitive and unfair. The boy does not work part-time, as some students do. We are carrying the entire financial load, which, in these days, is plenty heavy. What do you say, Ann? — Palo Alto Parents.

Dear Parents: If a college student wants to do his own thing, I say OK. But he should not expect his parents to pay his way while he's doing it. I'm with you, and I hope you hang tough.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Donohue: Recently I had all the symptoms of an ulcer. My doctor ordered a "blood sedimentation rate test." The test result was "56." I was told it should be around 20 to be normal. Tests showed an ulcer, or at least some inflammation was seen. I am taking medicine for the ulcer and am improved. However, a recent follow-up test showed a score of "59." Can you explain this test? — J.J.

Sedimentation means "a settling." In medicine, the sedimentation rate is a laboratory test that tells things about your health in a general way.

A person's blood is placed in a tube. The distance the red blood cells fall toward the bottom in a given time is called the "sedimentation rate." Your first test showed that your cells settled downward 56 millimeters in an hour, which is high. Normally, they settle only 20 millimeters in an hour (in one testing method). The greater the drop, the more the likelihood of an illness.

The sed rate is "non-specific." That means it does not indicate any particular illness. In fact, there are about 50 different illnesses that cause high "sed" rates.

The high rate may indicate some continuing inflammation. However, some people have high rates without any illness. If only your sedimentation rate is abnormal, and if you are feeling well, there is not much more for you to do but to report to your doctor at the intervals he tells you to.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a 30-year-old woman and in the last six months I have had black hairs growing in my chin area. I take birth control pills and I was wondering if this could have anything to do with it. — Mrs. E.J.S.

Facial hair growth has been reported by users of birth control pills, but it is not a common side effect.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I there a common food or exercise that enlarges the breasts quickly, if not quickly, at all? — L.A.

No.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 71 years old and in good health. I have large breasts. Is it advisable to have surgery at my age? — Mrs. S.S.

You are not too old to have breast reduction surgery, especially if you are having problems like upper-back ache. If it is strictly for cosmetic purposes, then I'd say it's not a great idea.

Canada on path to 'fiscal suicide'

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP said Monday that Canada was on a path of economic suicide reminiscent of the Great Depression and high interest rates were contributing to the downturn.

Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants) was the second government MP to attack his own party's high-interest-rate policy before the Commons finance committee. He spoke on the anniversary of the day of the stock market crash 50 years ago.

A few minutes earlier, Saskatchewan MP Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain) told the committee there was no clear evidence that the last 11 interest-rate increases had done anything to strengthen the economy and hinted they might have done more harm than good.

NOWLAN URGED Gerald Bouey, Governor of the Bank of Canada, who was appearing as a witness before the committee, to remove his banker's hat for a moment and imagine himself as part of the borrowing public.

If you were a farmer would you borrow money to buy a herd or to build a barn?

If you were a businessman would you take out a loan to expand your plant or buy equipment?

"I think we're on such a merry-go-round that we're not only going to get dizzy, but also very sick before we get off," he said, referring to spiralling interest rates.

The cost of borrowing money has gone up by 30 per cent since the Conservatives came to power May 22, Nowlan estimated.

It was the first time the Nova Scotia MP had spoken out against the bank's high interest-rate policy. Hamilton, however, made headlines several weeks ago by criticizing the government's decision to raise interest rates.

HE SUBJECTED Bouey to an intense cross examination.

Liberal Ed Lumley (Stormont-Dundas) said the government's repeated use of interest-rate increases to check spending and borrowing showed an unwillingness to explore other ways to control the amount of money in circulation.

He called on Bouey to take a hard look at the possibility of requiring the banks to keep more of their deposits on reserve as a way of reducing the amount of money in the marketplace.

That was the path the federal reserve board was following in the United States and it deserved serious consideration in Canada, Lumley said.

It may be fairer to increase the banks' reserve requirements than to keep raising interest rates, he suggested.

When interest rates go up, the affluent could still afford to borrow. But farmers and small businessmen were hit hard. By directly controlling the supply of money, the central bank might be able to reduce that inequity, he said.

LUMLEY ASKED the governor to explain for the committee the impact of a reported $3 billion miscalculation by U.S. monetary authorities last week in figuring the growth in that country's money supply in recent weeks.

Bouey, repeating what Finance Minister John Crosbie said earlier, said the mistake had played no part in the decision to raise interest rates last week. It amounted to little more than a bookkeeping error in one of the many factors the U.S. takes into consideration when deciding its monetary policy, Bouey said.

"And it has not affected our situation here at all."

Interest rates trouble Tory MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs struggled bravely Monday to stand behind their party's high-interest-rate policy, but many confessed it is becoming difficult to face their constituents.

Only two members of the government—veteran MPs Pat Nowlan of Nova Scotia and Alvin Hamilton of Saskatchewan—attacked their party outright before the commons finance committee. But almost every Conservative who spoke at the three-hour hearing said he had been inundated with complaints and tales of hardship from voters.

The remarks of Bert Hargraves (PC-Medicine Hat), an Alberta cattle rancher who rarely questions government policy, were typical.

He told Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, that it was a painful task for an MP to try to convince near-bankrupt ranchers and farm equipment dealers that the government had sound economic reasons for asking them to pay record interest rates.

Hargraves' remarks—with slight regional variations—were repeated by Ontario lawyer Paul Dick (Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton), Alberta lawyer Blaine Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills) and Muskoka insurance agent Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka).

Options sought to high interest

OTTAWA (UPC) — The government is studying alternatives to increasing interest rates to control inflation and protect the Canadian dollar on the international market, Prime Minister Clark said Monday.

But, Clark told the House of Commons, the government's present interest rate policy is the "most appropriate suggestion so far."

Clark urged opposition MPs to make suggestions for "acceptable alternatives" to the parliamentary committee which is grilling Bank of Canada Governor Gerald Bouey on the latest increases that have boosted the rate to a record 14 per cent.

"We are looking at alternatives now," Clark told the House after Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau attacked him for abandoning a "whole series of alternatives" Clark suggested when Trudeau was prime minister. When Clark was leader of the opposition, he had urged the former Liberal government to consider currency swaps, borrowing from the International Monetary Fund and a revaluation of Canada's gold reserves instead of raising interest rates.

Clark told the House the government's policy is to bring interest rates down. However, he said, "We are facing tough decisions today dealing with interest rates as a means of creating the kind of stability and strength in the economy which will allow us honestly and with some security to bring interest rates down in the future."

An angry New Democratic finance critic Bob Rae told Clark to "stop . . . acting like Superman" and tell consumers how the government plans to control inflation.

Rae demanded to know how much unemployment and inflation would increase if the government continued to increase interest rates.

"As little as possible," said Clark.

Interest rates border on peak says Bouey

OTTAWA (UPC) — Bank of Canada Governor Gerald Bouey said Monday Canadian interest rates were "at or near their peak" and he rejected possible use of foreign exchange controls to bring down lending rates.

Bouey, who faced strong criticism from both Conservative and Opposition MPs during a three-hour grilling before the Commons finance committee, said interest rates have probably gone as high as they can go.

"If we're not at the peak yet, we're awfully close to it," the bank governor told Conservative MP John McDermid, who asked if further increases were expected. "I've wondered this myself and we have to worry about it."

"I think we are at or near the peak," Bouey told reporters later. "Past experience should suggest that they shouldn't stay up there for a terribly long time."

Bouey was making his second appearance before the committee since raising the Bank of Canada bank rate to a record 14 per cent last week, a move he said was necessary to prevent the Canadian dollar from going "down the drain."

Bouey told the committee he was opposed to suggestions that Canada use foreign exchange controls to slow the flow of money from this nation in order to reduce its $7 billion balance of payments deficit.

"What are you going to control?" he asked. "Exchange controls would require a huge (bureaucratic) apparatus, and do nothing to finance the huge deficit. As well, people will not put money into a country that has restrictions for getting it out."

About a dozen Conservative MPs, who said the bank's actions on high interest rates will bankrupt small businessmen and farmers, tossed questions at Bouey during the appearance.

MPs SUPPORT BORROWING

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave approval in principle Monday to legislation authorizing the government to borrow $7 billion this fiscal year to help cover federal spending.

"Canada is like the Titanic," Finance Minister John Crosbie said in calling for passage of the bill. "And we're like the crew trying to pump her out."

Crosbie said the Conservative government seeks authority to borrow only as much as it needs to cover economic shortcomings it inherited from the previous Liberal government.

"If we don't get it (passage of the bill) where will we get the money?" he asked. "Pick the gold out of people's teeth?"

The bill now goes for detailed consideration by a Commons committee.

The government had hoped the legislation would be passed quickly. The previous Liberal government had sought $10 billion in borrowing authority but dissolved Parliament before it could be passed.

The debate on the bill bogged down when the opposition expressed anger at Crosbie for a number of things, including his refusal to appear before a special committee studying interest rates at a time the opposition thought he should.

Mortgage help nearer?

OTTAWA (UPC) — Finance Minister John Crosbie introduced his long-awaited mortgage scheme Monday in Parliament and urged MPs to pass the legislation before Christmas so homeowners and buyers could benefit this year.

"If this House passes it before Christmas, it will better enable 3.8 million homeowners in Canada to bear the increased costs of mortgage interest, increased costs of looking after a home and increases in property taxes," Crosbie said shortly before the bill was given first reading.

Under the plan, which will be prorated to date of purchase, eligible homeowners would receive maximum tax credits of $1,250 a year by 1982 and a flat credit of $250 annually on residential property taxes.

In 1979, homeowners will be able to claim 25 per cent of the credit benefits—$312.50 in mortgage interest payments and an additional $62.50 in property tax credits.

Opposition MPs immediately attacked the bill, which is estimated to cost $575 million in the first year and a minimum of $2.3 billion when it is fully implemented in 1982.

Liberal housing critic Llyod Axeworthy said the legislation would benefit only 30 per cent of Canadians, completely ignore those who rent and homeowners who have paid off their mortgages.

New Democratic housing critic Simon de Jong said the mortgage credits, which will increase to $1,500 for the average homeowner by 1982, would be "entirely wiped out" by interest rates now at a record 14 per cent.

"Our party has always maintained that a general tax credit for low-and middle-income earners and an interest subsidy program for those earning under $25,000 would be far fairer," said de Jong.

"I would say this bill is predictable and disappointing because the government didn't listen to any of the criticism when Mr. Crosbie unveiled the details of the program last month."

In the House, Crosbie told MPs that despite increased mortgage interest rates, homeowners "will be assisted considerably . . . if we pass the mortgage interest and property tax credit scheme promptly before Christmas so they will get the tax relief they need this year."

Crosbie said the program would boost a sagging housing market, create jobs and make it easier for first-time home buyers.

King coal on throne again —CP

Cloud rises as about 635,000 metric tonnes of earth shift to expose coal seam at Sparwood in the East Kootenays. Coal, which built provincial centres such as Nanaimo and Fernie at the turn of the century, is king again, particularly along B.C. side of Alberta border from Crowsnest area in the south to the Sukunka at the edge of the Peace River country.

Bank moves out, credit union in

Cordova Bay has lost a bank, but it will soon gain a credit union.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, citing a change in policy, closed its branch in Cordova Bay shopping centre Aug. 31, along with seven other branches in B.C.

Residents began making requests to the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union to fill the vacancy.

General manager Harry Down said Monday "we kept on getting calls and found it hard to believe they weren't all the same people, so we conducted a survey. The results confirmed it would be worthwhile to move in."

There are about 1,200 households in the neighborhood and the new branch, which will be open "within a month," Down said, will also be able to draw on neighboring communities.

Down said the branch will offer full facilities and will probably employ four people plus a yet-to-be-named manager.

Nelson board chosen

A special board has been named to guide development of the David Thompson University Centre in Nelson, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Monday.

McGeer said the centre has a "unique role to play in post-secondary education in B.C., especially in the southeastern region of the province, and development of that role will be accelerated and enhanced by the new advisory board."

Dr. Roland Grant of Kelowna, former principal of Okanagan College and of Notre Dame University, will head the panel.

Among those appointed to the advisory group was William Gwyer of Victoria, a former president of West Kootenay Power and Light.

The centre is an "integrated centre for degree and diploma programs offered by the University of Victoria and Selkirk College, and for distance education offered by the Open Learning Institute," McGeer said.

Private hospitals' books for vetting

The provincial government has hired a team of 40 accounting and management specialists to check the books of private hospitals in B.C.

The team has six weeks to examine accounting, books, buildings, medical appliances and drugs.

Health Minister Robert McClelland stressed Monday that the decision to check the accounting of private hospitals does not mean the government thinks there is anything wrong with the procedures now in use.

"It is not an investigation," he said. "The operators of private hospitals have been complaining that we, as government, did not pay them enough to break even on their costs and we are basically saying 'show us and then we can reconsider our formula.'"

McClelland said it would be improper for the government to increase the rates to the hospitals unless the increases could be justified.

He said the possibility of the government looking at private hospital books had been discussed earlier and "appeared to meet with approval."

He said he was sure the private hospital operators realized "the government needs more than a verbal assurance that more money is needed."

If private hospital operators did recognize that fact they didn't react that way when the government decision was made public Monday.

A special meeting of the officials of the Private Hospitals Association was immediately called in Vancouver.

McClelland said the team of 40 consultants from Peat Marwick Ltd., Ernst and Whinney and DeLoitte, and Haskin and Sells should complete their check of the books fairly quickly.

"They will not be checking every private hospital in the province," he said. "They will be selecting groups (of hospitals) as related to size and costs."

In August the government increased payments to private hospitals by roughly nine per cent where residents in long-term care programs were being cared for.

The 8,600 patients in the program pay $6.50 a day toward their health care costs. That payment remained static under the new formula which saw personal care patients subsidized by the government at $14.20 a day (from $13.50), intermediate care one patients at $18.20 (from $16.45) intermediate two $21.75 ($20.55), intermediate three $35 ($28.30) and extended care $35 from $34.50.

In total, private hospitals receive close to $30 million a year under the long-term care program.

McClelland said that although six weeks had been allowed under the cabinet order authorizing the check into private hospital operations, he expected the job, which officially began Monday, to take less time.

Total cost of the study has been set at $75,000.

Licence fines anger judge

Judge Blake Allan Monday in Victoria provincial court criticized the Motor Vehicle Branch's system of charging $25 to drivers wishing to get their licences back after having their driving privileges suspended for amassing penalty points.

Allan made his views known before fining 23-year-old Larry David Anderson, of 4157 Glanford, $150 for driving while under suspension.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Anderson was pulled over Sept. 7 by the Colwood RCMP for a traffic violation on Goldstream Avenue. Anderson could not produce his driver's licence, but was given a traffic ticket and allowed to proceed.

Five minutes later, the officer received information that Anderson was under a licence suspension and stopped him again, this time on the Old Island Highway.

Laughton said Anderson's licence was suspended by the motor vehicle branch on July 31 for penalty points accumulation and failure to pay the $25 assessment.

Anderson said he had received an interim licence from the branch and was under the impression he was not under suspension because he had told his girlfriend to pay it when he received the notice of suspension in the mail.

After learning that Anderson could have had his driving privileges back the day after the suspension was imposed merely by paying the $25, Allan called the system a "tax-collecting scheme."

"It doesn't accomplish very much," Allan said before levying a fine.

However, an 18-year-old youth who was charged with three counts of driving under suspension during a 15-day period gave Allan a chance to warn those driving with court-ordered suspensions or banned because of a poor driving record of impending jail sentences.

Scott Andrew Belmonte pleaded guilty to his fourth such charge this year, and received a total of two months in jail.

He pleaded guilty to driving while disqualified Sept. 9 in Saanich, Sept. 12 in Shawnigan Lake, and Sept. 23 in Victoria. He had been fined $200 for the same thing July 27.

On Sept. 9, a citizen's complaint at about 11 p.m. resulted in Saanich police stopping Belmonte in the Town and Country shopping centre parking lot.

Three days later, Belmonte was caught speeding while heading south on the Island Highway near Shawnigan Lake.

And on Sept. 23, he was stopped at Government and Fisgard on a routine check by Victoria police.

Laughton said Belmonte had racked up 45 penalty points prior to the three charges to which he pleaded guilty Monday afternoon. With the convictions, Laughton added, Belmonte received 30 more penalty points.

Defence lawyer James Main said his client had only a Grade 7 education because of dyslexia and other major learning disabilities.

He said Belmonte's only success in life was his ability to work on cars and drive them.

Allan called the action a flagrant ignorance of the law, and warned others who are in the same position that they can expect incarceration unless there were some extraordinary circumstances.

He gave out two sentences of 15 days and one of 30 days, each to be served consecutive to each other.

Phillips on way to Orient again

Three weeks after getting back to B.C. from Japan and Korea, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips is off to the Orient again, this time with China as the target.

The Chinese mission is a first of its kind for B.C. It is expected to lay the groundwork for future co-operation in industry and trade with China, Phillips said.

Making the trip to Peking, Shanghai and Canton will be Phillips, his associate deputy John McKeown; ministerial assistant Candide Temple, and consultant Dr. Jan. Walls.

Businessmen making the trip will be Raymond Smith, vice-president of the pulp and paper division of MacMillan Bloedel; Douglas Watts, vice-president, business development, H. A. Simons (International) Ltd.; Len M. Mitten, vice-president, Canadian Car (Pacific) Division; Dr. N. B. Keevil, Teck Corporation; Joseph Irwin, vice-president Kaiser Resources; Ian Walker, president INTEG; Dr. J. S. MacDonald, MacDonald Dettwiller Associates; Len Wright, president, Wright Engineering; Eric Martin, vice-president engineering, B.C. Hydro, and Newell Morrison, chairman of the B.C. Development Corporation.

Provincial Court

One of two men charged with a break-in at a school over the weekend was denied bail Monday in Victoria provincial court.

Jerry Wayne Kitchen, 21, of 506 Pendray, and James Edward Flangen, 23, of 1017 Denman, were jointly charged with a Friday break-in at the James Bay elementary school at 140 Oswego.

Victoria police, alerted by an alarm, converged on the school and spotted two persons inside. They apprehended the pair outside, one following a short chase.

Judge Blake Allan denied bail to Kitchen, but released Flangen on $500 recognizance. He remanded both until next Monday for election of their trial method.

JUDGE WILLIAM Ostler fined three 18-year-old youths $100 each and ordered each to pay $50 restitution for damage to a taxi April 22.

Alan Howard Burns, of 3668 Shelbourne, Mark Philip Metcalf, of 2904 Phyllis, and David Christopher Sinclair, of 1609 Rowan, changed their plea to guilty on a joint charge of mischief causing wilful damage just before a scheduled trial.

Crown counsel Clint Kittle entered stays of proceedings against two others who were originally charged with the same offence.

Court was told the incident began at about 2:15 a.m. when Bhangu Kuldip Singh, the 30-year-old owner-driver of a C and C Taxi vehicle, picked up six youths, including a female, at 6187 Hunt.

Singh tried to tell the group he couldn't take six, but two sat in the front and the other four in the back seat and ordered Singh to take them to Doncaster elementary school, 1525 Rowan.

While in the cab, Kittle said, they broke the interior light, spilled beer, grabbed the radio microphone from Singh when he tried to radio for assistance, and ripped out the meter wires.

As Singh was trying to make a left turn from Quadra onto Reynolds, one of the youths grabbed the steering wheel, causing the vehicle to go onto the sidewalk with some minor damage.

In front of 1185 Reynolds, the youths got out and someone broke the windshield with beer bottles, broke the radio antenna, and kicked the side of the cab. One youth getting out of the front flung the door so hard he buckled the right front fender, Kittle added.

Saanich police arrived at the time and apprehended the youths.

Total damage was $265, court was informed.

Ostler, who placed each on six months probation, warned the youths that if they had had a criminal record for similar offences, they would have been looking at jail terms.

CALLING DRUGS a great scourge to today's youth and cocaine an evil substance, Allan imposed a $600 fine on 23-year-old Richard David Prette, a recent arrival from Prince George.

Prette pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine. Crown counsel Elke Kluge said Prette was checked at about 7:10 p.m. Friday in the 3500-block Beach Drive by Oak Bay police.

Officers found about half a gram of cocaine on him.

Duty legal aid lawyer John Hills said Prette had been tree planting in Prince George for five months and had planned to start a six-month European trip on Wednesday. Hills described Prette as a forthright, honest, hard-working and responsible young man and not a leech on society.

Prette explained that he was not involved in the drug scene and didn't know anything about cocaine.

Before imposing a fine, Allan said he had been considering a jail sentence before Hills spoke, and suggested the courts were far too lenient in drug-related cases.

A 40-YEAR-OLD man who pleaded guilty to his second drinking-driving offence in just over 18 months was given a 14-day jail term by Allan.

Claude Robert Wyman, of the Madalon C docked at Fisherman's Wharf, pleaded guilty to impaired driving Oct. 16.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Wyman was stopped at about 1:30 a.m. after he had collided with a tow truck on Esquimalt Road near Catherine Street. The tow truck driver pursued Wyman's vehicle until Head and Dunsmuir. Subsequent breath test readings of .23 and .20 were obtained by Esquimalt police, Laughton said.

Wyman was convicted April 4, 1978 of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and was fined $400.

FINED $450 for having care and control of a vehicle while having a blood-alcohol reading over .08 was 55-year-old Robert John Maltby, of 1512 Fell.

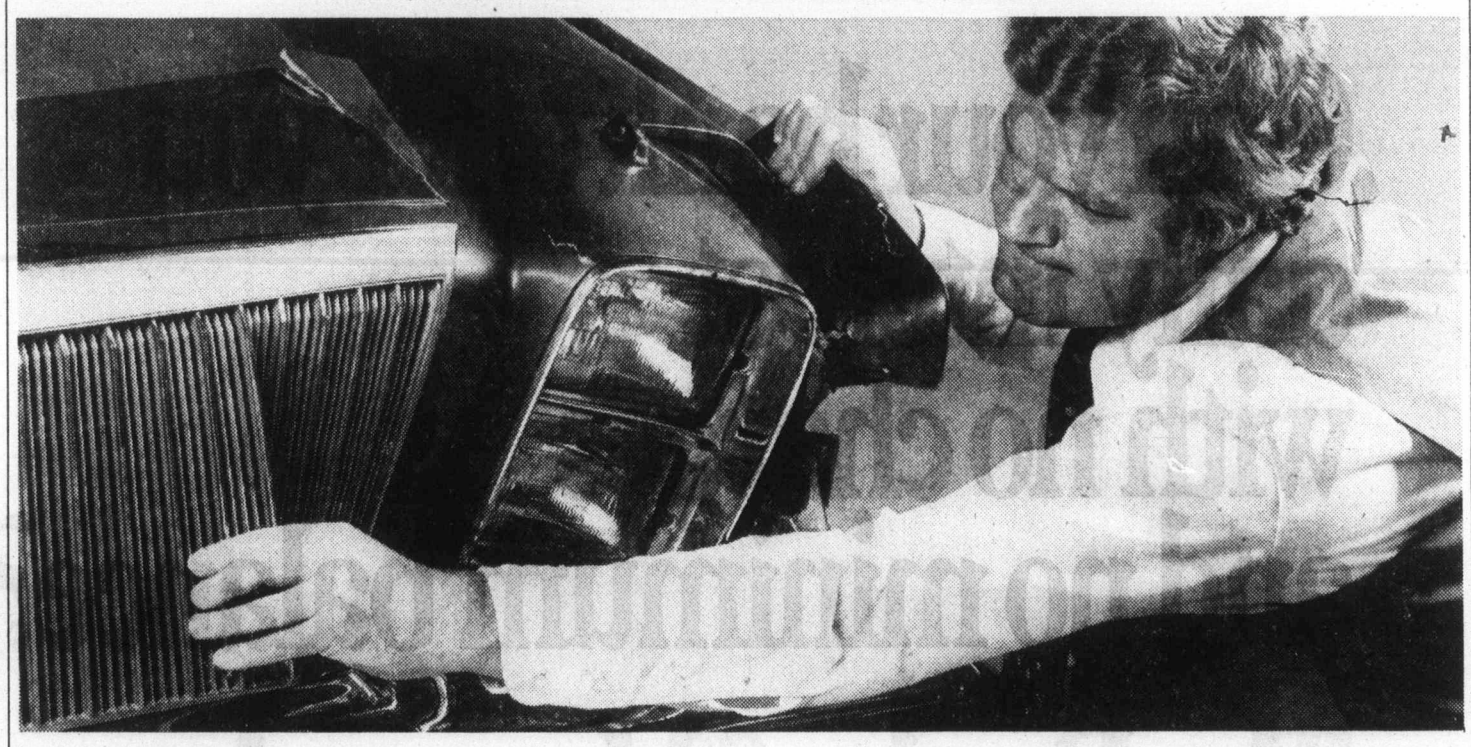
THIS IS HIS FOURTH ACCIDENT IN TWO YEARS. WHY ISN'T HE PAYING MORE FOR INSURANCE?



Up until now there simply hasn't been a satisfactory system for placing additional financial responsibility on people who consistently cause accidents. As things stand, this man only loses his Safe Driving Vehicle Discount...once.

But that's all going to change.

The Provincial Government has challenged the entire auto insurance industry to develop a new rating system based on individual abilities and responsibilities rather than probabilities–one that doesn't discriminate against anyone because of age, sex, marital status or where they live.

I.C.B.C.'s response is a revolutionary new program called Fundamental Auto Insurance Rating. We call it F.A.I.R. Because it is fair. The program will start to be phased in on March 1, 1980 with first priority being given to removing age, sex and marital status as factors in determining how much you pay for your auto insurance. Those changes will be made in the first two years. Geographic inequalities will start levelling out in 1980 and will be eliminated by 1985.

By March 1, 1982 the basic idea will be in place: everyone will be innocent until proven guilty; everyone will be a safe driver until proven unsafe; everyone will be entitled to a base premium until they lose that right.

But if everyone enjoys these rights, they must also share the responsibilities. That's why the new F.A.I.R. program includes a Driver Accident Premium. The implementation of the Accident Premium will place the principal responsibility on the driver who causes accidents.

And that brings us back to our multiple-accident driver. Obviously, any program that sets a fair base premium is going to cost money. So who'll make up the difference? The bulk of the money will eventually come from those who are responsible for accidents. They'll pay higher premiums. And the more accidents they have, the more frequently they have them, the higher their premiums can go.

Isn't that the way it should be? That's F.A.I.R.

Sam's ladies slap calm on Zeballos

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

The ladies of Zeballos are no longer on the picketline singing country songs and demanding that Sam ("Sam's Our Man") Rogers be reinstated by the Tahsis Logging Co.

They've gone home. Which might have been all right by the company, except for one thing: Everyone else seems to have gone home too.

No one was working at the Zeballos logging operation Monday despite a Labor Relations Board order Saturday.

The order was that those involved "cease and desist." Which is technically what happened. There was no picketline Monday. But there was also nobody passing the spot where it had been posted last week.

"Maybe it's just like the picketline was there in principle," says Sam Rogers, the man who professes ignorance of what is going on around him, even though he is the central figure in the strange little drama.

Sam was fired Oct. 19 for the part he was accused of playing in a walkout Oct. 17 and 18. Seven women began picketing last Wednesday to get him reinstated, singing songs and carrying signs while their husbands dutifully handed out coffee and cookies.

By Friday woodworkers had put picketlines up at the company's two sawmills at Tahsis and logging operation at Gold River.

Their union, the International Woodworkers of America, wasn't entirely happy with developments. It moved to prompt a return to work in advance of the Saturday LRB hearing. This meant there was no cease and desist order pertaining to the other locations.

But big trouble remained at Zeballos, and Earl Foxcroft, president of the IWA's Port Alberni local, was headed there today on a twofold mission; to take part in an expedited grievance procedure involving Rogers; and to try to talk his members into returning to work.

If the Rogers case isn't settled at the grievance level, it will go to arbitration.

Meanwhile, the ladies of Zeballos are sticking to their knitting. There has been suspicion raised in some quarters that they were nothing more than pawns in the first place—even if they did look better and sing better than any male picketline you can name.

Inmates wreck cells

AGASSIZ(UPC) — Prisoners were kept in their cells Monday following an overnight disturbance that resulted in damage to 39 cells at the recently-opened maximum security Kent Institute, said a prison spokesman.

The disturbance began at midnight after one prisoner demanded drugs and was refused them, the spokesman said.

The prisoner then set fire to his cell and began tearing it up. More than half of the prison's 100 inmates also began damaging their cells, the spokesman said.

Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence told the House of Commons Monday that "as far as I know everything is under control."

John Braithwaite, another department spokesman, said the outbreak was "really a disturbance rather than a riot" and that no one was hurt in the incident.

The prison was officially opened last summer. It is 100 kilometers (60 miles) east of Vancouver.

There was no estimate of damages available and no charges had been laid, the spokesman said.

Radio talks signal hope

Talks aimed at ending the federal airport and marine radio operators' strike were to resume today on the understanding that workers designated as essential would be back on the job.

Weekend meetings held by the operators and officials of their union, the Public Service Alliance of Canada, paved the way for a return to work beginning at midnight Monday.

The strike began two weeks ago and the designated operators began rotating stoppages of their own across most of the country a week later.

Slightly more than half of the 1,200 operators fall into the essential category. The treasury board's condition for new talks—the first in more than four months—was that they be back on the job.

The union says the walkout of designated employees has not touched B.C., although problems have arisen in the province over the decision to handle only distress calls.

This has had a strange effect on the weather ship Quadra which by Monday had been sitting a week 1,300 kilometres out in the Pacific Ocean without performing any of the functions for which it was intended.

Whether the new mood means the four operators aboard the Quadra would begin transmitting weather reports was something that couldn't be answered Monday night.

"We probably won't know before tomorrow (Tuesday)," said D.H. Baylis, Vancouver Island area communications manager for the Canadian Coast Guard.

The four operators had said they would handle only emergency calls and at first didn't answer a communique from Baylis. Because there was no response, the radio teletype message was sent three times.

"I finally got an answer from the men on the Quadra," Baylis said. "They said the message was received three times. But they didn't say what they were going to do."

By Monday, Transport Canada reported that strikers had closed 69 airport radio stations. The government has issued suspensions to 102 operators who had walked off the job, or were providing only emergency service. More than 600 letters of warning are reported to have been sent out.

There have been numerous incidents, including picketline activity that has either delayed or cancelled flights.

Save the Children cans ready again

As in the past 27 years, boys and girls from schools and Sunday schools throughout Greater Victoria will carry collection cans on Halloween Wednesday in support of the Save the Children Fund.

Initiated by long time supporter Gertrude McGill in 1951, the fund provides emergency relief, food, shelter, clothing, medicine, education and vocational training in some 50 countries around the world, and is also involved in community development projects emphasizing self-sufficiency.

The B.C. branch of the fund sponsors nutritional programs on Vancouver Island and regularly ships clothing, bedding, health kits and other essentials to nursing stations in northern Canada.

The collection, which has expanded to include thousands of children all over the province, totalled $19,603 last year in B.C.

B.C. joins feds in heroin fight

Canadian Press

The B.C. and federal governments are combining forces in a new joint committee to co-ordinate an attack on heroin trafficking.

The committee co-chairmen will be the deputy minister of justice in Ottawa and his provincial counterpart in B.C.

A team of federal and provincial crown prosecutors will be formed to deal with major heroin cases and more RCMP will be assigned to the province under the agreement setting up the program.

It is expected that federal Justice Minister Jacques Flynn will urge the cabinet to amend the Criminal Code to allow voluntary treatment of heroin addicts as a form of sentence or a term of probation.

B.C. has the largest number of known heroin users in the country.

Boston station cancels Ali TV film

BOSTON (AP) — A Boston television station canceled Monday night's showing of a film about a slave who becomes a U.S. senator because it feared the program would fuel racial tensions.

"The film contained inflammatory language and there were racial stereotypes in it," said program director Dick Kurlander of WBZ-TV, an NBC affiliate owned by the Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.

"But the main thing was the unusually graphic incidents of racial violence, in particular, scenes of violence against children. The last 50 minutes is actually one large, violent scene, sort of like the shootout at the Alamo."

The film stars Muhammed Ali, the former world heavyweight boxing champion.

Violence in Boston high schools, under court orders to integrate with the use of busing since 1974, erupted after a Sept. 28 shooting incident left a 15-year-old black high school football player paralyzed.

School department officials started what they called a "get-tough" program a week ago to quell violence, and Robert Foster, chairman of the rapid transit Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority ordered increased security at bus and train stations.

The two-part program, Freedom Road, based on a novel by Howard Fast, started Monday night on NBC with Ali playing a freed slave who is elected to the Senate after the Civil War.

Bad luck chum, but it's no coho

BENSON WITH his "coho" which turned out to be a chum salmon.

The 1979 Silver Anniversary edition of the Colonist King Fisherman Contest is over and for a while it looked as if a new coho leader from Bamberton waters had been caught Saturday.

S.Sgt. Dean Benson of the RCMP headquarters in Victoria caught an 18.3-pounder at Bamberton, which at Anglers Anchorage Marina at Brentwood was thought to be a coho. That would have meant a new leader in the King Fisherman coho category on the last weekend of competition.

But Monday morning Benson took his "coho" down to federal fisheries, where it was identified as a chum salmon. It has happened before, but the major clue between a coho and chum salmon is the vertical bars which start to appear as the chums home in to the rivers.

Benson doesn't take over the coho lead, but he does win a Silver Anniversary fun decal for bringing some excitement to the last weekend of competition.

Weigh-in stations and anglers are asked to make sure that all King Fisherman entries are in the mail to the Colonist, so the contest wrap-up can be completed without anyone being left out of prize draws or trophy awards.

The fish to beat in the King Fisherman Contest are a 63½-pound tyee, a 56½-pound chinook, an 18-pound coho, an 8.1-pound trout and a six-pound bass. Drift fishing subscriber leader is a 38.6-pound chinook and subscriber hootchie-fly leader is a 44½-pound tyee.

Arts centre closing door

The Emily Carr Arts Centre is to close its doors this week but for how long depends on what arrangements can be made by the provincial government.

The Emily Carr Arts Society recently wrote Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis stating it was no longer prepared to operate out of the government-owned Emily Carr House, 207 Government, under the present arrangement which provides no government funds for the centre's programs of exhibitions, art classes and tours. (The society has use of the house in exchange for interior maintenance.)

Director Bill Bowie said Saturday the centre is to close its doors to the public Friday, but the society in its letter to Curtis gave him until Nov. 9 to counter its decision with an offer of support in the form of administrative salaries. (The centre, run by volunteers including Bowie, has annual costs of between $12,000 and $15,000 which are met by the society.)

However the minister didn't wait that long, taking the society's decision at face value. Late last week, he announced that the society was "withdrawing from Emily Carr House in James Bay."

In expressing regret over the society's decision, Curtis said "that notwithstanding the society's inability to carry on we shall continue to maintain the building and provide public access to it.

"My ministry will be proceeding with plans for the renovation of the house in the near future," Curtis said in a prepared statement.

The Curtis announcement caught Bowie somewhat off guard. He said he had expected the minister would respond to the society's letter with at least a meeting between both sides.

"It's hardly the way to treat us", said Bowie, who complained of past indecision within the government concerning the operation of the house.

The society has operated out of the house for seven years, five of which have been with the provincial government as landlord. Bowie estimated that about 500 artists' works had been exhibited at the centre in the last five years, and that about 200 persons took art instruction at the centre last year.

The withdrawal of the society didn't necessarily mean the end of the house as a centre for art exhibitions and instruction, according to Curtis.

Mother's second tragedy

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto mother who lost one child on Mother's Day watched in horror during the weekend as another was killed.

Nellie Griffis's seven-year-old daughter, Lisa, was crushed beneath the wheels of a car Saturday as she tried to cross a street near her home to return a hair dryer to a friend.

Five months ago, Lisa's 11-year-old sister, Teresa, was hit and killed by a train.

"First it was Teresa, now Lisa," Mrs. Griffis said Monday. "I just couldn't believe it was happening again."

Lisa, a grade 1 student, was her youngest child. Her three grown-up children have left home. Three others still live at home—Roberta, 16, Stephen, 13, and Tommy, 10.

"I just have my kids, that's all I have left," she said. "The sooner I can get them away from here the better."

Mrs. Griffis, 36, has been trying to raise them on mother's allowance benefits in an Ontario Housing Corp. development, but she said she wants to leave the city and its tragic memories.

Neighbors have set up a trust fund to help her put the down payment on a house in the country.

Dimitrios Chronopoulos, 35, of Toronto has been charged with careless driving in Lisa's death.

Truscott query bid by Clark

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark said Monday he would ask the justice department whether the goverment should or could reopen the murder conviction of Stephen Truscott.

Truscott, now 34, was only 14 years old when he was convicted of the murder and rape of 12-year-old Lynn Harper in Clinton, Ont.

A new book written by Bill Trent alleges there is fresh evidence available to show that Truscott was innocent.

Among the new evidence listed by Trent is a confession by a prisoner in Kingston Penitentiary, but he said no action had been taken by authorities.

Spraggett denies youths' homosexual allegations

WINNIPEG (UPC) — Former Canadian Broadcasting Corp. television host Allan Spraggett denied any homosexual involvement with youths at the start of his trial on two charges of gross indecency Monday.

"I emphatically deny them," Spraggett said when asked by defence lawyer D'Arcy McCaffrey about the allegations made against him by two youths, 14 and 16 years old, who appeared earlier as crown witnesses.

Spraggett, 47, told provincial court Judge I.V. Dubienski that he was not even in Winnipeg at the time he was alleged to have committed one of the acts.

Besides, Spraggett testified, he did not have homosexual tendencies, a claim supported by two medical experts who took the witness stand for the defence.

"I found asolutely no abnormality," said Calgary psychoanalyst Dr. Logan Stanfield, who testified he had met with Spraggett 100 times during 18 months of psychoanalysis. "I would say categorically I found nothing to suggest these tendencies."

Toronto psychiatrist Dr. Basil Orchard, author of a Law Reform Commission of Canada study on pedophilia, said that in a 4½-hour session with Spraggett Oct. 19 Spraggett met none of the criteria normally expected in a person with homosexual or pedophiliac tendencies.

Both the crown and defence were to sum up their cases Tuesday morning.

Spraggett, the author of 14 books, is the father of five children aged 10 to 24, and has been married for 25 years.

Extra candidate, one in doubt

Two surprises in city

There were two surprises Monday in Victoria city election contests, although it is hard to assess the eventual effect on the aldermanic and mayoralty races.

Shortly before the noon deadline a new candidate filed as a candidate for mayor, while at deadline time it was ruled that candidate Douglas Christie was ineligable as an aldermanic candidate because he has a contract with the city.

CHRISTIE, WHO HAS BEEN in Nanaimo for the past week, was unavailable for comment on the ruling, but he has two days to file a protest, and may yet be able to join the aldermanic contest.

If Christie is allowed to run, there will be 17 candidates for eight aldermanic seats, under a new policy that sees all city council seats up for grabs every other year.

Previously the city was run in the same way that other local municipalities are run with half of the aldermen running for election each year to ensure continuity on council.

MEANWHILE 32-YEAR-OLD student David Borgtrom, of 32 Paddon Street filed his papers as a candidate for the Mayor's seat shortly before noon, Monday.

He said he was entering the race to give voters an alternative from outside the usual political world.

IF ELECTED, HE SAID, he will insist upon having neighborhood "shadow councils".

Veteran versus a newcomer IN SAANICH

A battle for the mayor's chair between a seasoned campaigner and a newcomer to the municipal scene was assured in Saanich when nominations for the Nov. 17 election closed Monday.

Incumbent Mayor Mel Couvelier will be opposed by retired brigadier-general Keith MacGregor, a director of the Cadboro Bay Residents Association.

Ex-mayor Ed Lum, changed his mind as expected, and instead of running for mayor will be one of 12 candidates vying for the four aldermanic seats.

Last-minute candidates included former alderman Robert Cameron, Donald Smith, and University of Victoria student Robert Geddes.

They joined former alderman Ian Cass, Judith Nyquist, former Greater Victoria school board chairman Hal Knight, Muriel Overgaard, Robert Bowcott, James MacGregor, and incumbents Howard Sturrock and Geoffrey Vantreight.

Aldermen David Paterson and Fred Severson are not seeking re-election.

Cameron, 37, a high school teacher, said in an interview after filing his nomination papers he was "dragged back into running because vative MP Donald Munro, who won re-election with almost double the votes Cameron received.

"I want to see more citizen participation in council affairs, and will revive my election expenses bylaw," he said.

the Saanich council ship is not on the right course."

Cameron did not seek re-election last year after completing his first two-year council term. In the May federal election, as a New Democratic Party candidate, he was unable to unseat Esquimalt-Saanich Conser-

Smith, 49, a member of the Blenkinsop Valley Ratepayers' Association, finished eighth in a nine-candidate field in last fall's aldermanic contest.

The B.C. Hydro distribution engineer has been an outspoken critic of council policy regarding keeping land in the agricultural land reserve which cannot be farmed.

North Saanich mayor faces returning rival

The only mayoral race on the Saanich Peninsula is in North Saanich, where incumbent George Westwood on Nov. 17 will be facing a strong challenge from two fellow council members—Eric Sherwood and Owen Philp.

Westwood ran against Philp two years ago in a two-way race for mayor and won easily.

However, Westwood has not got on well with the rest of council, and it is possible that several aldermen will announce their support for Sherwood for mayor.

The North Saanich election is also interesting because of the candidacy of Jacqueline Wilson, a 47-year-old financial director. If she wins, it will be the municipality's first woman alderman in about six years.

North Saanich is the only peninsula municipality that doesn't have a woman on council. Both Sidney and Central Saanich have women as mayors. Sidney Mayor Norma Sealey was returned to office Monday by acclamation.

In Sidney, eight candidates, including three incumbents, are trying for six vacant aldermanic seats.

Central Saanich holds a municipal election every year. The three incumbents whose seats expired this year are trying again, and will be challenged by three newcomers.

List of Vancouver Island nominations

Some dandy races for Year of the Mayor

By RAY KERR
Colonist Island Editor

This is the Year of the Mayor in Vancouver Island elections.

With nominations closing at noon Monday, it is obvious the most interesting contest will be in the North Cowichan part of the Cowichan Valley.

As was expected, Mayor George Whittaker will be opposed during the Nov. 17 municipal elections by three other candidates.

And all three are aldermen on the current council, with one of them a former mayor.

He's Gerry Smith, whom Whittaker defeated to reach the top spot he now holds.

The other two aldermen running in this unusual four-way mayoralty race are Graham Bruce and Dennis Hogan.

Another interesting contest in the Cowichan Valley will be in the city of Duncan, where Mayor Ken Paskin is being challenged by lawyer Mike Coleman, a popular alderman.

And in nearby Lake Cowichan, there will be another mayoralty contest, with teacher Ken Douglas going against restaurant operator Edward Forrest for the vacant mayor's chair.

One of the more interesting places to watch on Vancouver Island will be the Nanaimo school board, where there are four regular two-year seats up for grabs but only one incumbent trying.

She's housewife Marjorie Stewart, and among those also running are Margo Westrheim, retired; well-known Nanaimo mayoralty candidate Pat Barron, another retired person; instructor John De Boeck; well-known journalist Agnes Flett; Lloyd Cooke, retired, and former school board member Guiseppe Multari, a psychologist.

Also interesting will be the Area F race for the Nanaimo Region Board.

This area is Coombs-Hilliers-Errington and has been represented by Joseph Pullen, who is running again.

However, the well-known opponent of the regional board concept is being opposed by carpenter Robert Collins and operating engineer Wallace Clint.

Nanaimo Region Board's Area D, Lantzville, also will see an incumbent fighting for his political life.

Following is the list of Vancouver Island nominations, with x denoting incumbents.

Acclamation for mayor in Esquimalt

Esquimalt voters will go to the polls Nov. 17 after all, but only to fill three aldermanic seats. They will have no say in deciding who replaces retiring Mayor Art Young.

Long-time Esquimalt resident and 10-year alderman, Ken Hill, an electrical foreman at Dockyard, was declared mayor-elect by returning officer George Merz Monday when no other candidates filed nomination papers by the noon deadline.

AND UNTIL THE LAST HOUR, it looked as though there would be no aldermanic election either, until 39-year-old marine consultant Darwin Albert Robinson of 729 Lampson filed his nomination papers.

The other aldermanic candidates include the only incumbent, draftsman Colin Blair, of 939 Reeve, seeking his second term along with first-time candidates Robert Henry Jones of 896 Admirals Road and Victoria May Gains of 876 Admirals.

BOTH THE MAYOR-ELECT and the aldermanic candidates were hard put to come up with any issues for the municipal election.

"There is no issue other than the continued good management of Esquimalt," said Robinson.

Jones said that he had no axe to grind or crusade to lead in seeking election.

"I think we've had good municipal government in Esquimalt over the years, and I'd like to see it kept that way," he said.

HILL REGARDS HIS acclamation as evidence that the voters are satisfied with council. The 10-year council member said his administration would continue working toward "better services and surroundings for the people."

Gains said it was the now-evaporated issue of tank farm relocation that first interested her in running for council. Now the cashier-clerk says the challenge is to become the first woman elected to council.

"I think I'm the seventh to try.

"Esquimalt is a working man's municipality and I don't know if it's very women's libbish," said Gains, whose nomination papers were signed by her next-door neighbor, Mayor Young.

Elections the rule for school boards

Elections were insured for all but one school board seat in the Greater Victoria area Monday, as nomination slates for school board elections were filled.

The only incumbent not facing an election this year is Rubymay Parrott of North Saanich, in the Saanich school district. Mrs. Parrott is a long-time trustee and currently president of the B.C. school trustees association.

Another experienced Saanich trustee, Jack Armstrong, will face newcomer John Betts, in his section of the district, and Esther Galbraith of Central Saanich will defend her first-term record against Vittorio Preto.

In Sidney, Roy Hyndman will face another election less than six months after his win in the June 30 byelection for Sidney mayor, Norma Sealey's old school board seat. Challenging him is Don Hacker.

In the Greater Victoria school district, former trustee Lavinia Greenwood, and Allister Frame, manager of the Classic Car Museum, will contend for a one-year term which opened when trustee Susan Brice resigned to run for a seat on Oak Bay council.

Four Greater Victoria two-year terms expire this year, and only two incumbents have decided to run again. School board chairman Carol Pickup will be seeking her second term on the board, as will John Young. Both were elected for the first time in 1977.

Trustees Glynn Williams and Mary Breer decided not to run for second terms, and four new candidates have joined the fray, making a total of six candidates for four seats. The challengers are Terrence Hackett, a Victoria accountant; Joan Johnston, a former Burnaby school trustee; Joan Dayton; and lawyer Michael Hutchison.

Early last week the Sooke District, with four terms up for grabs but only one incumbent running, faced an electoral famine with no new nominees identified. By the time nominations closed, however, electors had a feast, at least in the Belmont zone, the eastern portion of the district. No fewer than eight candidates had signed up to compete for two seats

The Belmont zone candidates include three who have attempted to get on the board before: Jack Hannam, Leif Wergeland, and Mary Jacobson. Other candidates are Peter Boyd, Carole Carver, Clarence Munro, Jean Stiven, and Don Lindsay.

In the Milne's Landing zone, the western part of the district, two seats are open and only one incumbent, Pauline Chamberlain, is in the field. Trustee Bill Stephenson decided not to run again. The other candidates in the race are Melvin Elrose of the West Coast Road, and Kenneth Purse, of Townsend Road.

Rejection Number 5 for UVic area housing

Plans for a residential development on a 1.25-acre site near the University of Victoria were rejected for a fifth time by Saanich council Monday.

The lastest proposal would have seen 20 two-bedroom apartments built in two two-storey buildings on McCoy near McKenzie Avenue.

Other unsuccessful proposals turned down in the past three years ranged from a 72-unit development to a 32-unit townhouse proposal.

Ald. David Paterson cast the lone vote in favor of the latest plan.

Area residents complained about increased traffic on narrow McCoy Road.

In other business, council:

● Ignored recommendations of planner Gil Laurenson and the Advisory Planning Commission that property on Glasgow Avenue not be rezoned for apartment use.

● Rezoned property in the Blenkinsop Valley for expansion of the par-three Mount Douglas golf course.

EDMONTON (UPC) — Alberta's planned purchase of the Roloff Beny photographic collection—at a cost of up to $12 million for mainly a portfolio on the Shah of Iran—was bitterly criticized as "absolutely irresponsible" Monday.

New Democratic Party leader Grant Notley and Social Credit Party leader Bob Clark said Alberta should scrap plans to buy the 82,000 black and white and color transparencies by the Alberta-born photographer.

Estimates of the cost of purchasing and preserving the collection range from $1.1 million to $12 million. Most photographs are of the Shah of Iran, his family and scenes in Iran.

"The price is outrageous. We shouldn't spend a damn cent on it," Notley said.

"This whole matter is absolutely irresponsible."

Clark also charged it was "total and absolute incompetence" on the part of the government and the culture ministry.

"I think the government has been taken for a ride," Clark said, adding that, politically, Alberta could draw global criticism for purchasing the collection.

Culture Minister Mary LeMessurier had said Friday the negotiated price for the collection was $545,000.

Still at issue, however, was whether the Alberta government will be able to display the collection if and when the final contract is signed with Beny, who now lives in Italy.

"The copyright issue is still in dispute. If we don't have the copyright, then the whole thing is a complete farce," Notley said.

Beny said in a recent interview he would not give up his copyright, even after his death.

Both opposition party leaders demanded clarification of all costs involved in any purchase. They said the actual purchase price would only be a fraction of the over-all cost of preserving transparencies and displaying the photographs.

A break with the past

A wrecking-bulldozer stands idle in the ruins of an Ottawa heritage house during the weekend after two thirds of it was demolished. The 1854 vintage stone structure known as Clegg House was owned by St. Peter's Lutheran Church. A city injunction stopped the work.

Kissing activists ejected

TORONTO (UPC) — Five gay activists were escorted from the public gallery of the Ontario Legislature Monday after sitting in the front row kissing one another in a "consciousness-raising" demonstration.

Earlier, the five men and two others, neatly dressed in jackets and ties, walked through the halls of the legislature arm in arm in an effort "to take a gay presence" to the Ontario government.

The protesters, most of whom participated in a sit-in last August in the office of Attorney-General Roy McMurtry, were seeking to pressure McMurtry into setting a date for a meeting with them promised at the time of the sit-in.

THE ACES

IRA G. CORN, JR.

"Nothing so needs reformation as other people's habits." -- Mark Twain.

. . . . . .

West got off to the best lead in his defense of today's shaky game. Unfortunately, he was the victim of a bad habit later in the play and he lost his opportunity to beat the game.

East won the trump ace and returned a trump, declarer winning with his jack. Declarer played his heart king, which West won, and now declarer was out of danger. He won the next trick and had an easy time scoring four heart winners in dummy, the spade ace and one spade ruff and five trump winners in his own hand. Making five diamonds.

To beat the hand, West must duck his heart ace when declarer offers him the king. The excellent opening lead, coupled with a paralyzing duck, would isolate dummy's heart winners and there would be no way to make 11 tricks.

Had West chosen any other lead, declarer would have had a clear path to score 11 tricks. Assume a spade lead to declarer's ace, declarer unblocks the heart king and it matters not if West wins or ducks.

If he ducks, declarer takes the cross ruff route and ruffs three spades in dummy while ruffing clubs back to his hand. He scores a heart, a spade, three spade ruffs and five diamond winners in his own hand.

If West takes his ace of hearts immediately, the play goes the same as before and dummy's heart suit provides the vital winners to score the game.

Finding the crucial opening lead is not enough. It is also important to follow with constructive play.

Alberta may peg oil at world price

VANCOUVER (CP) — If the federal and Alberta governments are unable to reach a new oil price agreement this winter, Alberta will set its own price for in-province consumption, Premier Peter Lougheed says.

He said Monday that if other provinces wanted oil at that price, they could buy it or go elsewhere.

"Within Alberta, people will pay the world price for oil fairly soon, and if other Canadians want to pay the price, they can have some, too," he said following an address to the Vancouver Board of Trade.

Lougheed said he doubted the federal government would move before Alberta and use its discretionary powers to set the price of oil for sale outside the province.

He said at a time when Ottawa was trying to soldify the federalist forces in Quebec by promising not to touch Quebec Hydro or other natural resources, it was not likely to encroach on another province's jurisdiction over resources.

"I wouldn't go so far as to say it (a unilateral decision by Ottawa) would lead to a breakup of Confederation, but it would create some stresses and strains," he said.

There was always the chance that Ottawa would challenge Alberta's unilateral decision to set its oil prices, he said, but that would be unreasonable interference in a province's power to decide when and how it wanted to develop its resources for sale.

The provinces own their resources and can determine when they develop them, but they need federal permission to market them outside provincial boundaries.

At this winter's price negotiations, Alberta will continue to press its position that domestic oil should be raised to world prices.

Canadian oil sells domestically for $13.75 a barrel, while the Oil Producing and Exporting Countries said in June their ceiling for a barrel would be $29.37.

Alberta is willing to make concessions, Lougheed said, such as phasing in the in-

Oil threat 'grandstanding'

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed is "grandstanding" in threatening that his province will set its own oil prices, says Opposition Leader Bob Clark.

New Democratic Leader Grant Notley said the statement meant Alberta was "headed for a major confrontation" with a federal government that would have all the other provinces on its side.

Pricing oil at world levels would destroy economic diversification in Alberta and be "catastrophic for Alberta farmers and for the Canadian economy as a whole."

Clark said he doubted the seriousness of Lougheed's intention to raise prices that high, but said he did not think Albertans should have to pay the world price for oil, adding, "It's our resource. We own it."

If hack driver Dan Feehan finds lack of business disturbing, his 17-year-old horse Danny Boy doesn't seem to miss endless trots around park. Tomorrow is their last day on city streets for season. Embassy stays in Tel Aviv until peace pact —Clark

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative government has dropped its proposal to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv.

"We do not intend to move the embassy to Jerusalem," Prime Minister Clark told the Commons on Monday.

In reversing one of the most controversial decisions he had taken since becoming prime minister after the May 22 federal election, he said that when there was a just and lasting peace in the Middle East, his government might re-open the question.

Clark was following up the recommendation of Robert Stanfield, former Conservative party leader, who toured the Middle East studying reaction to the government's intent.

Arab countries had objected vehemently, and Canadian officials have admitted considerable loss of business. The Israeli government supported the move.

Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau said Clark had blundered and cost Canada both business and credibility.

He added that one Arab told him that Stanfield had said during his Middle East tour: "Don't worry. We will change the policy, but also we will change the prime minister pretty soon."

Stanfield later described Trudeau's remarks as mischievous.

"You don't believe I'd say that, do you?" he asked reporters. "There's just no truth to it."

Answering questions at a news conference, the former Conservative leader said he decided to make his recommendation now because it became very clear during his travels in the Middle East that moving the embassy could jeopardize peace efforts.

Stanfield stressed that his recommendation was based primarily on peace considerations rather than commercial interests.

Canada had important economic interests in the Middle East, but the most important interest was peace, he said.

"It's on this basis I made my recommendation."

Egyptian ambassador Hassan Fahmy said he was "happy and satisfied with this decision of the Canadian government."

Abdullah Abdullah, head of the Palestine section of the Arab Information Centre here, said it was a courageous decision, but Canada should go further and recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization and Palestine Liberation rights.

Trudeau also said that Stanfield had given de facto Canadian recognition to the Palestine Liberation Organization by talking to its representatives while in the Middle East.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, said the Conservatives were irresponsible in proposing the embassy move in the May 22 election campaign and irresponsible in announcing implementation of the move after the election.

And Immigration Minister Ron Atkey, the man given most of the responsibilty for Clark deciding to move the embassy, said he was in favor of any move designed to help peace in the Middle East. He said he hoped the Jewish community would

Decision applauded by Arabs, not Israel

OTTAWA (CP) — The Israeli embassy said Monday that Prime Minister Clark's latest move on the Jerusalem embassy issue would not help bring peace in the Middle East.

But Egyptian Ambassador Hassan Fahmy said he was "happy and satisfied" with Clark's decision not to move the embassy.

Israeli Ambassador Yeshayahu Anug said Clark's announcement "causes disappointment."

Linking the embassy move "with the ultimate outcome of the peace process isn't helpful to the peace process itself," Anug said.

It would not help peace "since it may be interpreted as acceptance of the obstructionist and negative view of the Arab rejectionist states regarding that process," he said.

The rejectionist states are the Arab states who have denounced Israeli-Egyptian peace talks.

"Peacemaking needs continuous support, and those who oppose it deserve no reward," the ambassador said.

"Jerusalem will remain the capital of Israel and the united city of peace in which religions and peoples live together," he added.

Fahmy said he was glad Clark dropped the Jerusalem move quickly, because if the problem had festered "the situation would have been more difficult to solve."

Abdullah said Clark's move had "removed the scar in Canadian-Arab relations" caused by Clark's original embassy plan.

Roads run bloody in San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — A leftist march exploded into a bloody gunbattle with police Monday that left dozens dead and wounded in streets resembling a battlefield. The moderate ruling junta cordoned off the heart of the capital with armored vehicles, but a wave of looting broke out after the five-hour battle.

Reporters trapped inside the area said leftists, most of them armed with pistols, attacked the National Palace and the mayor's office, burned several cars and set up barricades with garbage cans. Police fired back with machine guns from armored vehicles.

Officials at Rosales Hospital said its ambulance crews picked up or saw the bodies of at least 37 people killed and that it was treating 35 wounded. Unconfirmed reports said as many as 100 were wounded.

A wave of looting broke out after the battle ended at nightfall, with persons believed to be common criminals breaking windows and knocking down doors along a five-block row of shops around the central July 14 plaza, witnesses said.

The Popular Revolutionary Bloc announced it would free most of the 250 hostages it took Wednesday at the labor and economy ministries on Monday evening, but would keep three cabinet members as well as the buildings.

Witnesses said the firefight was triggered by 300 young members of the leftist Feb. 28 Popular Leagues who opened fire on policemen during a march. Earlier, authorities had identified them as members of the Bloc.

Win the Island win off until next week

There won't be any winner of game four of the Colonist name the mountains and Win The Island contest, published Sunday.

An error in the entry form —omission of a seventh circle in the Mystery Island portion of the quiz—unfortunately nullified the chance of anyone winning.

So game four, with apologies to confused contestants, will be cancelled and the contest extended another week with a new puzzle in next Sunday's edition of the paper.

Resources bulge surplus

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist business editor

VANCOUVER — B.C.'s forests, its oil and natural gas and its stature as a vacation destination have come through once more.

Figures disclosed here Monday by the province's finance minister showed that natural resources and tourism were major reasons why B.C. continues to show a healthy budgetary surplus, quarter after quarter.

Strong consumer spending and difficulties with the science of budget forecasting also contributed to the $188.6-million surplus shown by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe. The latest figures are for the six-month period from April 1 to Sept. 30.

Revenue for the period in question was $2.49 billion, $217.4 million more than was predicted. Expenditure was $2.3 billion, $54.9 million more than expected.

Wolfe, in making his first quarterly report outside the Legislative Buildings, said he expected to see the surplus whittled somewhat when the nine-months mark was passed, but he quickly added that the government was now fully confident that a balanced budget was assured for the full fiscal year.

The Sept. 30 surplus was $162.5 million more than forecast and $74.2 million more than the surplus at the same time in 1978. Wolfe said the continuing strong housing starts figure in the U.S., which absorbs the majority of B.C.'s lumber exports, was just one reason why his estimates were so far out.

"U.S. housing starts are holding at a remarkable level, especially considering the anticipated recession there. This is at a level that was impossible to anticipate," Wolfe said.

Other things contributed strongly to the performance of the forestry sector, the minister said. Constant employment throughout the industry without serious disruption through walkouts or strikes, the value of the Canadian dollar vis-a-vis the U.S. dollar (export sales are in that coin) and strong prices and increased deliveries of pulp, paper and lumber, could all share the credit, he said.

Timber sales, logging tax and other forest fees totalled $210 million, which was more than a 100-per-cent jump over last year's six-month

Heritage fund? No plans here

VANCOUVER (Staff)— This province has no plans to create a B.C. Heritage Fund like the headline-grabber in neighboring Alberta.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said in an interview here Monday that the concept had been "looked at," but nothing was being done to create such a fund. Alberta has amassed some $5 billion in oil and gas revenues and is setting it aside for the time when its vast petroleum resources dwindle.

In response to a reporter who asked him to justify the fact of repeating surpluses, Wolfe shot back:

"No we don't apologize for surpluses in British Columbia. For four years we've been functioning on a balanced-budget policy, not to be following that religiously, but to tread with care in terms of estimates.

"You should bear in mind that any surpluses we've recorded in prior years have been appropriated to stimulate employment, extending highways and increasing the homeowner grant. This (money) is not hidden away in some vault."

Sexes may share Oak Bay council

When voters in Oak Bay municipality go to the polls Nov. 17, they may well end up electing Canada's first council evenly split between the sexes.

There is a good possibility that three of the six aldermanic seats on council will be held by women after the vote, although the mayor's chair will, for this term, be a male preserve.

Three women are among the four candidates for the two one-year seats on council, and incumbent Ald. Isabel Craig is expected to be re-elected on her record. The other woman alderman in Oak Bay, Shirley Dowell, is not facing election this year.

In addition to the five vacant aldermanic seats, Oak Bay's 12,400 voters will have to choose a new mayor to replace poll-topping Brian Smith, who has moved to the provincial scene.

The two-way race for mayor pits former alderman John Goult against veteran alderman Doug Watts for the top job.

Goult, an Oak Bay lawyer, retired undefeated last year after four two-year terms. Watts, a senior engineer with the provincial water resources branch, has been on council continuously since the late 1950s, except for one term when he unsuccessfully ran for reeve.

Watts' run for the mayoralty, combined with the resignation of Ald. Norman Pimlott two months ago, left two one-year terms open.

Seeking the job are former school board chairman Susan Brice, Margaret Marston, homemaker and longtime council watchdog as a delegate of the League of Women Voters, Mabelle Murphy, co-ordinator of the Oak Bay senior citizens' centre, and chartered accountant Walter Holms.

Three incumbent aldermen—contractor and former school trustee Peter Bunn, political science professor Neil Swainson and homemaker Isabel Craig—are all seeking re-election to two-year terms.

They will be opposed by three others: Walter Dodsworth, former manager of the Butchart Gardens, who served on council from 1961 to 1969, when he was defeated in a mayoralty bid by Frances Elford; travel agent Henry William Smith, and retired businessman Jack Rhodes.

Church fires Carter's pastor over woman

NAMES in the NEWS

President Carter's pastor, Charles Trentham, has been fired by the congregation of the First Baptist Church for dating a woman who was separated—but not divorced—from her husband, church officials said in Washington on Monday. Officials said the congregation voted 166-140 Sunday to accept the recommendation of the deacons that Trentham's contract not be renewed.

Singer Joan Baez asked the world's three superpowers Monday to cast aside ideology and act "like grown-ups" in an international effort to save the lives of starving refugees in Cambodia. Ms. Baez, in a Washington news conference, called on President Carter and the leaders of the Soviet Union and China to join in a "united front" to get much-needed food and medical supplies to the Cambodian people.

Any recording artist would be happy to land on Billboard magazine's charts at 159 out of 200 albums ranked. He'd be especially happy to be listed "with a bullet"—industry jargon that says it's a hot-selling record, showing signs of rapid upward movement. So who's the latest happy artist that has all that going for him? Pope John Paul II, that's who—with his Pope John Paul II Sings at the Festival of Sacrosong, on the Infinity label.

Michael Douglas, whose career took off with China Syndrome and went right on running with Running, which opens nationwide Friday, has a brand new project in the works. He said on the Stanley Seigel Show that he'll be costarring in January or February in New York with Jill Clayburgh in an as yet untitled film.

Johnny Weismuller is on the comeback trail, and after a series of strokes that left him in a coma for 30 days, it's a long one. The man who immortalized Tarzan in countless films is recuperating in Acapulco, Mexico, and wife Maria denies reports quoting him as saying he went to the resort area to die. Says she, "he did not come to Acapulco to die. He came to live." She adds the 75-year-old former Olympian has even started swimming again.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, the first French head of state to visit divided Berlin, pledged Monday France's deep commitment to the city. Speaking in German before a parade of some of the 2,700 French troops stationed in West Berlin, Giscard said: "Berlin is and remains the bastion of freedom. We are actively striving towards detente in Europe."

Raul Castro, brother of Cuban leader Fidel Castro, says the mock landing by U.S. Marines at Guantanamo Bay provided fresh evidence of American scorn for the sovereignty of other countries. Castro, Cuba's defence minister, made the remarks Sunday on the 20th anniversary of the death of Camilo Cienfuegos, a leader of the Cuban revolution. The broadcast was monitored in Miami.

creases to the world level and keeping the price slightly below the Chicago Composite Index to give Canadian oil an advantage over United States oil.

The Chicago Composite Index combines U.S. wellhead and imported oil prices to produce the average U.S. oil price.

Alberta will also be asking the federal government to take action to ensure Canada is energy self-sufficient by 1990. This can be achieved, Lougheed said, by moving to world prices for oil, accelerating construction of oil sands plants in Alberta and increasing tax incentives for oil and gas producers.

Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick will have to substitute natural gas for oil in the next decade he said, while Newfoundland and Nova Scotia must be encouraged to expand their off-shore oil and gas exploration.

The premier said Alberta will make no apologies for its demands. Ontario's cries that a move to world oil prices will cause unemployment and inflation in Eastern Canada were ridiculous.

"They have had, since 1973, the lowest costs of any industrial area for energy, and I haven't seen them taking advantage of it," he said.

In Ottawa, Liberal finance critic Herb Gray accused Lougheed of being narrow-minded and said if the premier was serious, he was "doing a disservice to the cause of confederation."

"It's shocking to hear a premier supposedly in favor of Canada staying together talking like this," he said in an interview.

Gas could chop deficit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Increased natural gas exports from Alberta and British Columbia could cut the country's balance of payments deficit by $2 billion and reduce the need to raise interest rates, Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed said Monday.

Lougheed said there could be a dramatic increase in sales of gas to the U.S., if the federal government would allow it. Proposals for exports now before the National Energy Board would raise $2 billion a year, he said.

The deficit, which is reaching record proportions, has been a major factor in depressing the value of the Canadian dollar. The balance of payments counts exports and imports of goods and services such as interest payments on loans and dividends paid to foreigners.

Costly blunder, Trudeau charges

understand the position of the government.

Challenged by Broadbent and Trudeau in the Commons to state firmly whether the embassy would be moved, Clark said, "We do not intend to move the embassy to Jerusalem."

His formal statement to the House said the government accepted the Stanfield "recommendation that no action be taken on the location of the Canadian embassy until the status of Jerusalem is clarified within a comprehensive agreement between Israel and Arab leaders."

In his report, Stanfield said Canada had to retain credibility with Arab countries and Israel by being fair-minded.

"We could not do this if we were to move our embassy to Jerusalem," he said.

But Stanfield said his recommendation did not necessarily foreclose indefinitely a move of the embassy to Jerusalem.

"It is my view, however, that the question of the relocation of the embassy must await the resolution of Jerusalem's status as part of a just and lasting comprehensive peace settlement.

"Once this is achieved, the embassy question could be reviewed in light of the provisions made in such a settlement."

Asked what damage Clark's promise had done in the Middle East, Stanfield responded, "I don't believe any on-going damage has been done either vis-a-vis Israel or the Arab countries."

Stanfield added that he hoped the type of re-examination process his mission represented would improve relations with both sides.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent said Clark's promise to move the embassy was irresponsible.

In Washington, spokesmen for the state department and the National Security Council were reluctant to comment on Clark's announcement, saying the location of a Canadian embassy in a foreign country was a matter for Canadians to decide.

The state department spokesman noted, however, that the U.S. embassy in Israel was in Tel Aviv.

Surplus bulging as resources boom

total, the B.C. figures show.

Unanticipated revenues from strong sales, fees and rentals of oil and gas leases, plus increases in other mineral taxes, all added up to a $314-million total in that sector, up more than 50 per cent from the 1978 figures.

Two increases in export prices of natural gas, and thus increased revenue for the B.C. Petroleum Corp., saw its performance also increase by about 50 per cent.

Tourism, shaking off anticipated trouble in gasoline supplies for would-be visitors from the U.S., showed a 22.9-per-cent increase in revenues from the hotel and motel room tax, Wolfe said. However, this was only part of the story, since dollars visitors spent were quickly recirculated through the economy.

The social services tax, reduced last year from five to four per cent, returned an increase of 18.7 per cent, after figures were adjusted to account for the new rate. However, in actual dollar terms, this figure fell from $331 million to $305.4 million.

But it wasn't all good news. There were budgetary overruns of $54.9 million in some ministries.

about 18 per cent to $603.5 million, (a $44.4-million over-forecast, primarily as a result of increased payments to the Medical Services Commission, hospital programs and long-term care); an expanded highway construction plan ate up almost $40 million more than anticipated, and a serious forests fire summer added up to an extra $10.4 million.

The increased revenue also covered six-month losses reported by three crown corporations: B.C. Rail, B.C. Hydro and the Ocean Falls Corp. B.C. Rail reported a net loss of $45.9 million compared with a loss of $39.1 million last year; Ocean Falls lost $4.2 million compared with a deficit of $2.6 million last year; and Hydro lost $13.7 million, half of last year's $27.7 million loss.

Asked if recently announced increases in the central bank rate, being quickly passed on to the public, would have any notable effect on B.C.'s economy, and how it might reflect on his budgetary figures, Wolfe said he agreed with federal officials that it would "be tough medicine to take."

After noting how B.C.'s economy and flows of cash were closely related to the U.S., he added:

"Obviously, given a period of time, it is going to affect our economy. Nobody can deny this. We can only hope it's a short-term remedy and will be effective in dealing with a very serious problem—inflation."

Wolfe said in his presentation that B.C.'s rate of inflation was only 7.9 per cent, compared with the national figure of 9.6 per cent.

$5-billion oil plant needed but plan changes sought

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta energy resources conservation board said Monday the proposed $5-billion Esso Resources Canada Ltd. heavy oil plant at Cold Lake was necessary to Canada's energy future but should go ahead only with changes to the original Esso design.

In a 210-page final report to the Alberta cabinet, the board said the project, which it approved in principle in August, could come on stream in 1986.

The operation is expected to produce 140,000 barrels of crude daily. The board said that without oil sands plants, demand for Canadian oil west of Montreal would exceed supply by 1988.

But the board questioned Esso's ability to recover, as proposed, 20 per cent of the 8.2 billion barrels of bitumen at the project site without supplementary techniques.

It rejected requests to use natural gas to heat the production process and to take some of the plant's large water requirement from nearby Cold Lake.

It called for planning to alleviate various social effects, including a potential population increase of 18,000.

It said the provincial government should look to compensate displaced local trappers and "clarify the legality of affirmative action programs (for hiring local residents and natives) as soon as possible."

Growing support

Step closer to museum in Cowichan

DUNCAN — Cowichan Valley residents moved one step closer to having their own museum when at a recent packed public meeting they unanimously approved the Activity Centre building as the proposed site.

Cowichan Historical Society, which has been searching for a home for its historical artifacts, has received support for this site from Duncan city council and some members of North Cowichan council, but has received little support from the Cowichan Valley Regional District.

Many local organizations and business groups are supporting the historical society and the proposed site for the museum, including the Duncan Downtown Business Association and the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce, whose president, Ajeet Bawa, moved the motion approving the Activity Centre as the new site.

Chairman of the meeting, Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin, said city council favored the Activity Centre, and being across from the post office was "excellent for tourists and logical that it be used for a museum."

COWICHAN HISTORICAL SOCIETY president Myrtle Haslam said that 14 prominent persons and organizations have, by letter and personal representation, said "they are very much in favor of establishing the museum."

She said the society had also sent a letter to the city Heritage Advisory Board, requesting it proceed with declaring the Activity Centre building, formerly the Christian Science Church, as a heritage site.

This dedication would save the 50-year-old historic church from exterior alteration and ensure its preservation for the future.

A suggestion that the church building be sold and possibly demolished and that the museum be located in the new community centre was strongly opposed.

John Adams, B.C. museums adviser, said Duncan was the last sizeable Island community with no museum.

ADAMS SAID DUNCAN WAS IN a very good position geographically to draw visitors from Victoria, particularly since it has been shown that 25 per cent of tourists travel to visit museums and historic sites.

He said it would be more economical and advantageous to start a museum now, while there are still many pioneer families here that could donate artifacts.

"It was important to note," said Adams, "that the 1982 B.C. new social studies curriculum is going to focus on local history."

EDWARD WILLIAMS, DDBA'S STATION and steam committee chairman, said his association recommended the activity centre as the museum site.

The CHS resolved to make representation to North Cowichan municipal council for its support for the proposed site.

Mrs. Dyck relaxes in Courtenay

Intuition counts

Seeing things her cup of tea

COURTENAY — This lady can see trees, ships, planes and a whole variety of other things when she looks in your tea or coffee cup.

Minnie Dyck does cup reading as a hobby and learned the art from her mother when she lived as a child on the Prairies.

She says there is a certain amount of intuition attached to cup reading but, to be successful, one must be able to identify signs and know their meaning.

Many of the things she has seen in a cup have come true, Mrs. Dyck says, and she has predicted accidents and told people not to travel on a certain day or by a certain method.

In one instance she saved some people from almost certain death in a accident.

Recently Mrs. Dyck read a teacup belonging to a reporter and accurately depicted several things which were being planned by the reporter. The two had not previously met.

Whether one believes in it or not, having a tea or coffee cup read is an interesting experience.

Port Alberni petition

Funds 'squandering' charged by residents

By JOHN HENDERSON
Colonist correspondent

PORT ALBERNI — Is the Port Alberni Parks and Recreation Commission needlessly spending $95,000 for facilities in Williamson Park, which are completely unnecessary?

The residents living around the park think so, and they presented a petition to city council this week opposing the commission's plans to start construction shortly of a fieldhouse complex which would include washrooms, a spray pool, a caretaker residence and craft and meeting rooms as well as the usual storage space.

In a letter accompanying their petition, spokesman Muus De Lange termed the project a "squandering of funds," on terms that the washrooms would be used only for a short period of the year, and then only on a limited basis, and that the residence for a caretaker would be a make-work structure for someone to "clean and supervise washrooms that are not required in the first place."

ON TERMS OF THEIR ALMOST-DAILY observance of the use to which the park was put, he said, the residents were satisfied that it was a well-maintained, clean and quiet playground, which was quite suitable just as it was.

De Lange was present at the council meeting to add the residents were also opposed to the location of the new facilities, even if the commission insisted on going ahead with them, since they would block the view of the park to several homes.

Ald. George McKnight, a city representative on the parks commission, told the meeting the petition had been presented to the last meeting of the commission at which permission had been granted to the contractor to begin work on the Williamson project this month.

This permission came about, he said, through the fact that the Gyro Club in the city had made a donation of $15,000 to the project, sufficient to keep the amount the city had originally budgeted for it intact in conjunction with a provincial grant.

UNFORTUNATELY, HE SAID, the granting of the contract came up on the agenda at the commission meeting before receipt of the petition.

When he was made aware of the petition, he said, he had immediately insisted that the commission meet again with the residents to hear their complaints, and this was arranged through a meeting called for this week at Echo Centre.

Ald. Bryon Latham, also a parks and recreation representative, said he was most surprised the residents had waited until this late date to make their feelings known.

The plans for Williamson had been made at least three years ago, he said, and only the lack of funding held them up until now.

De Lange admitted he had heard rumors of such plans for the park "as long as 12 years ago," but had not been aware that they were reaching fruition until some two weeks before the commission meeting.

He did not blame anyone for this fact, however, he said.

ALD. MO INWARDS, HOWEVER, who is a resident of the Williamson neighborhood, said he found it "inconsistent" that the parks and recreation people did not make it their business to inform residents of the area of such plans.

"I would think it would only be an act of good citizenship for the commission to consult with the people directly involved before proceeding with such projects," he said.

In addition, he said, he would like to know who in fact decided on the need for the new Williamson facilities. Obviously it was not made to satisfy the requirements of those who might be the greatest users.

Ald. Latham immediately went to the defence of the commission.

THE FIELDHOUSE COMPLEX was not being built merely because the funding was available, as was being implied, he said, but because a definite need existed to make the fullest use of valuable park space by more sports groups in the city who were demanding more facilities.

"I'm sure we are all aware that there are many sports in the city who are constantly demanding more and better fields, diamonds and so forth," he said.

Inwards maintained that he had never heard of any study of the use of the park being done, or of any proposal for greater use of the park by a specific sports group.

Ald. McKnight said that he had heard for years of the need for washrooms at both Williamson and Weaver parks, and that it was not until the commission meeting that he had become aware that the residents around the park were opposed.

The matter was referred to the meeting between the commission and the residents on a motion by Ald. Latham, which got unanimous support.

List of Vancouver Island nominations

Some dandy races for Year of the Mayor

By RAY KERR
Colonist Island Editor

This is the Year of the Mayor in Vancouver Island elections.

With nominations closing at noon Monday, it is obvious the most interesting contest will be in the North Cowichan part of the Cowichan Valley.

As was expected, Mayor George Whittaker will be opposed during the Nov. 17 municipal elections by three other candidates.

And all three are aldermen on the current council, with one of them a former mayor.

He's Gerry Smith, whom Whittaker defeated to reach the top spot he now holds.

The other two aldermen running in this unusual four-way mayoralty race are Graham Bruce and Dennis Hogan.

Another interesting contest in the Cowichan Valley will be in the city of Duncan, where Mayor Ken Paskin is being challenged by lawyer Mike Coleman, a popular alderman.

And in nearby Lake Cowichan, there will be another mayoralty contest, with teacher Ken Douglas going against restaurant operator Edward Forrest for the vacant mayor's chair.

One of the more interesting places to watch on Vancouver Island will be the Nanaimo school board, where there are four regular two-year seats up for grabs but only one incumbent trying.

She's housewife Marjorie Stewart, and among those also running are Margo Westrheim, retired; well-known Nanaimo mayoralty candidate Pat Barron, another retired person; instructor John De Boeck; well-known journalist Agnes Flett; Lloyd Cooke, retired, and former school board member Guiseppe Multari, a psychologist.

Also interesting will be the Area F race for the Nanaimo Region Board.

This area is Coombs-Hilliers-Errington and has been represented by Joseph Pullen, who is running again.

However, the well-known opponent of the regional board concept is being opposed by carpenter Robert Collins and operating engineer Wallace Clint.

Nanaimo Region Board's Area D, Lantzville, also will see an incumbent fighting for his political life.

Following is the list of Vancouver Island nominations, with x denoting incumbents.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

In a recent column we discussed the potting up of hyacinth bulbs to bring a touch of spring into the home through the darkest days of winter.

As far as I can find out, the first man to attempt the indoor culture of this Turkish bulb was a Martin Triewald, "director of mechanics to the King of Sweden."

Triewald didn't have much luck at first, but by trial and error he got the hang of it eventually and was able to "supply the curious ladies with nosegays to adorn their bosoms at Christmas."

One question that always crops up around the time when potted hyacinths come into bloom is whether the bulbs can be saved and grown again indoors the following year. Well, it HAS been done, but I doubt very much whether it is worth the effort.

You see, the bulbs have to get themselves plumped up again after flowering, and this means nursing the plants along for several months in a sunny window until the foliage dies down naturally. During all this time, the pots are occupying precious windowsill space, and with nothing to look at but plain green leaves. Weather permitting, though, the plants may be knocked out of their pot and planted outdoors where, with any luck, they will bloom again in the spring of 1981.

Before you go shopping for hyacinth bulbs, it would be wise to check up on what containers you have available for potting them, and plan your purchases accordingly. The common 3½ inch to 4 inch clay or plastic pot won't take more than one bulb, making a rather meagre display, but the shorter, wider "squatty" flower pots known as bulb pans will hold from three to five bulbs, according to size.

Hyacinths can be grown in ornamental porcelain or china bowls, too, but I think I'll leave this subject for another day.

One point I must mention, though. It is very important, when potting hyacinths, not to mix your varieties in any one container. If you were to plant, say, a pink, a white and a blue hyacinth all in one pot, they would come into bloom at different times.

The white flower would probably be just about finished and starting to turn brown before the blue one opened its florets, and at no time would you have a really eye-catching display.

On the other hand, if you were to plant up a container with three Pink Pearl bulbs or three L'Innocence whites, they would all commence flowering at the same time, making a much more satisfactory effect.

Hyacinths are not the only bulbs which can be potted up for indoor blooming, of course, and I don't think the winter scene could be considered complete without at least a few pots of tulips.

Here again, some kinds are much better suited for indoor culture than others. Long-stemmed tulips are grand for the outdoor garden and for cutting, but it is important, in selecting tulip bulbs for indoor culture, to stay with the short-stemmed kinds, for the tall ones grow even taller and floppier under indoor conditions.

The type known as the Single Early lies are about the right proportions for pot culture, and of these, one of my favorits is General De Wet, a glorious orange flower suffused with gold, and reputed to be the most fragrant of tulips.

Belona is a good yellow, only 15 inches tall and sweetly scented. Christmas Marvel is a cherry pink and very early; in fact, it has been forced into bloom in time for Christmas, hence the name. Prince of Austria is a brilliant scarlet with just a suggestion of orange, creating a sparkling effect.

The Double Early tulips, to my mind, lack the delicacy and refinement of the singles, with blooms more closely resembling a full-blown rose than the chaste goblet shape of the singles. Against this, the doubles remain in bloom somewhat longer, and are usually more fragrant.

Of the doubles, I recommend for indoor culture William of Orange, a soft orange shade flushed with a coppery red; Mme. Testout, deep pink; Goya, a very showy salmon red with a yellow base; and Hytuna, fairly new, in a deep butter yellow shade.

We have just returned from an exploration of Great Britain, a long-awaited adventure whose beginning was such a misadventure that we almost didn't get away at all.

We had never been to Britain, though it is the land of my roots, and of all cities in the world London was the one I most wanted to see; but our hopes seemed to have been jinxed in recent years by one piece of bad luck after another.

So I had almost a feeling of inevitability when we checked in at the British Airways counter in Los Angeles and discovered that we didn't have my wife's passport. I was to carry them both, thinking my passport wallet would be safer than her purse. I went through the wallet and all my pockets, twice, dismayed by the growing certainty that I had left it behind.

"Try again, slowly," said the airline man.

"No. I don't have it."

"I can't let her go without it," he said gently. "How far away do you live?"

"Downtown. Highland Park. Twenty, 25 miles. Each way."

He shook his head. "That's pretty far."

I didn't even have my car. We had left it at our son's house and taken a cab to the airport. "You wait here," I told my wife. "I'll go in a cab."

Then I realized I didn't have any money to pay a cab driver. I had already changed my dollars into English pounds. My wife gave me all she had—only $30. I hurried outside. There was no cab at the curb. I went out into the street and stopped one by standing in front of it. "Are you free?" I asked the driver.

He was not eager. "Where to?"

"Downtown. Five miles beyond. And back. If you can do it in an hour."

I don't know whether it was the challenge of driving 50 miles through Los Angeles traffic in an hour, or the prospect of a big fare and a big tip, but he said, "Get in."

I got in the front seat beside him and he started out with a smooth but thrilling acceleration that gave me hope I had chanced upon the right man. By the time we were onto the freeway I was thinking we could really make it. He was not going over the speed limit—not my much, anyway, I hoped—but he seemed to have an uncanny eye for the holes that opened up in the traffic ahead of us, as if he could estimate the speed and anticipate the moves of every other car in sight.

"You're a good driver," I told him.

But a few minutes later I checked my watch and guessed at the number of miles yet to go and decided it was hopeless. We would have to hold at our present speed, and there were too many uncertainties ahead.

"We aren't going to make it," I said. "No way."

"You know what you said? I am a good driver. We going to make it."

Suddenly a new anxiety shook me. By the meter, I could see that my $30 was going to fall far short of the fare, whether we made it or not. All I had was travellers cheques in $100 denominations, and I didn't know whether a taxi driver would take a $100 travellers cheque. I had to give him some extra motive.

"If we make it in an hour," I said, "I'll give you a 50 per cent bonus."

He didn't answer for a moment, but he seemed to accelerate a bit. Then, "Those Angels," he said, "they be all right if they quit thinking about the other guys and just play ball."

"Right," I said with finality. I didn't want to encourage baseball talk and distract him from his driving.

"The smallest cheque I have is for $100," I said. "If you don't have the change you can mail it to me."

I directed him off the freeway and up the hill to our house. I ran inside and found the passport where I hoped it would be. We started back. I checked my watch—we had used only 27 minutes. When we were halfway back, and my confidence was rising to his, I signed a travellers cheque and handed it to him.

"How much change you want?" he said. "The fare will be $44." I figured it out and told him, including the promised bonus. He reached into his hip pocket for his wallet and counted out $34 without slowing down.

When we pulled up in front of British Airways we had been gone just one minute short of an hour.

"You know what I liked?' the driver said. "When you said you'd trust me to send you the change."

You never know what will push a man to give you his best.

"You made it!" said the man at the counter, looking as astonished as I was. I showed him the passport and he gave me our boarding passes and said my wife was waiting in the ready room. The concourse and the escalator ride seemed endless. Her eyes were on the door when I pushed it open. I don't believe she had ever been happier to see me since the day I showed up for our wedding.

We were no sooner airborne than a stewardess who looked and spoke like Maggie Smith came by with a cocktail trolley, and I knew that, at last, we were off to the land of kings and poets and my ancestors.

Things I Learned En route to Looking Up Other Things:

● That the famous Rothschild dynasty in Europe found a way to keep the fortune in the family: fully half of the 58 marriages by the descendants of the founder were between first cousins. (The other half were between unrelated couples.)

● That seals purposely swallow pebbles which they use to crush food in their stomach by contracting their stomach muscles. (So might you if you lived mostly on shellfish.)

● That only because Pope Felix IV begot children did the church have Gregory the Great, who led in the spread of Christianity in Europe.

● That it is not illegal for a tennis player to use a racquet head as large as a door, or a handle as long as a broomstick. (Only the stringing, not the shape or size of the racquet, is prescribed.)

● That the Kadars in Kerala, a province of India are possibly the last remaining human tribe that can hunt by scent alone.

● That Lenin's four grandparents were of four races and religions.

● That sodium, a corrosive metal which burns on contact with water, and chlorine, which is a deadly poisonous gas; when combined give us—a grain of salt.

● That the American "robin" is not a robin at all, but a kind of thrush. (The true robin is a smaller bird, occurring in Europe.)

● That in the North Sea, where the total water depth seldom exceeds 150 feet, the maximum wave height attains an incredible 50 feet. (Oil-drilling rigs there must be designed to withstand storms that can produce waves up to 100 feet high and winds of 150 m.p.h.)

● That although Japan has a land area half as big again as that of the United Kingdom, only 15 per cent of this is suitable for farming, housing, and industrial development.

● That there is no fish called a "sardine," except in the can; what we call sardines are any of the small fish belonging to the herring family, such as pilchard and sprat.

● That the fantastic consumption of "ammunition" used by archers before firearms were invented is typified by the Parthian army who massacred the Romans at Carrhae—the 10,000 Parthian horse-archers were accompanied by 1,000 camels carrying nothing but spare arrows.

● That the Italian sculptor, Bernini, studied his reflection in a mirror while burning his own leg in order to be able realistically to portray the martyrdom of Saint Lawrence.

● That a bucking horse does not arch its back when trying to dismount its rider; the back remains absolutely straight, but the effect is given by the upward drive of all four legs together, and the lowering of the hindquarters. (A horse, by the way, has no collarbone.)

Fire rips through storehouse

Flames leap from former bottling plant on Eerie Street, James Bay, at weekend. Building, which has been used for last month by McQuade's Ships Chandlers, as a commercial fishing equipment store, was gutted in the blaze. Damage is expected to run to more than $1 million but could reach $2 million. McQuade's general manager, George Payne, said there would be no layoffs.

UVic geographer speaks out

Changes in forests?

By PAUL BENNETT
Colonist reporter

Forest-based activities have a dominant role in the economy of Vancouver Island but big changes in established and emerging attitudes must be made in coming years, according to University of Victoria geographer Michael Edgell.

Taking into account the multiplier effect, the industry may be responsible for 60,000 jobs, or 65 per cent of all employment on Vancouver Island, he said.

In a wide-ranging review of the forest industry in the UVic geography faculty book Vancouver Island—Land of Contrasts, Edgell said external and internal developments in the industry portend important changes in forest management and industrial operations.

THE CHANGES to come, he said, will possibly bring more "vicissitudes" than those that have surfaced in the past and were dealt with by a series of commissions and revisions to the old 1912 Forest Act.

There was criticism from the public that the new Forest Act passed by the Legislature in 1978 did not pay enough attention to the findings of the 1975 Pearse Commission.

"Forest management and industry face a transitional period, and in coming years significant changes in both established and emerging attitudes toward the forest resource must be accommodated."

NOTING THAT B.C.'s share of a fluctuating international wood products market is declining in the face of competition from the United States and Scandinavia, Edgell added that some of the larger forest companies operating in B.C. have investments in many of the competing areas.

"There is concern over the narrowing gap between cutting rates and the sustainable supply of harvestable timber . . ."

He said public sustained yield units on the Island were harvested at only about 70 per cent of theoretical allowable cut, but this harvest may be close to the maximum possible.

"When timber inventory data are transformed into actual harvest rates, insufficient account is taken of rough terrain, decadent timber with high unavoidable losses in harvesting, and economic and environmental constraints on closer utilization," Edgell said.

OWING TO POLICIES of the Forest Service, the supply situation on the Island was largely one of mature, often decadent, stands committed to the maximum possible cut. "In relation to existing processing plant capacity, however, these supplies are over-committed."

A study by the B.C. Forest Service's special studies division in 1976 showed that if coastal pulp and paper mills were to operate at full rated capacity, coastal wood supplies would fall short of satisfying their annual needs by more than 420,000 cubic units. There would be shortfalls, too, in log supplies for sawmills.

He warned that as older, high-volume stands are cut and replaced by lower-volume, regrowth stands, calculated allowable cuts would fall short of present levels, resulting in an "inescapable" reduction in harvest rates.

This would exaggerate the present excess processing capacity of Island mills, and dictate that no additional processing capacity be constructed.

EDGELL CRITICIZED the conservatism of the Forest Service in requiring all mature timber to be harvested before advanced regrowth stands—up to 90 years old—on the old Esquimalt and Nanaimo railway grant land, much of which has reverted to crown control.

The economic advantages of using these stands now are considerable, as many are past the rotation age planned for managed crops.

The stands are on the earliest-logged areas which generally were the most accessible and fertile sites and contain high timber volumes, yielding potentially higher returns than many old growth stands.

But, Edgell noted, some of the most productive areas are being significantly eroded by urban development.

Edgell said because of budgetary priorities, there are no provisions in TFL agreements for the Forest Service to support regrowth stand improvements or thinning.

"The old growth has been divided among the big companies, the timber is cut, seedlings are planted, but systematic silvicultural management of the growing crop is not undertaken," he said.

ALTHOUGH SOME tree-farm licencees have attempted limited stand improvements, the most intensive developments in second-growth management appear to be those of Pacific Logging, a successor to the E&N land grant controlled by Canadian Pacific.

With thinning, juvenile spacing and sanitation cutting, productivity increases by 100 per cent.

He said the company spends about $8.60 per hectare on silvicultural managment compared with an average expenditure by the Forest Service on crown land of only 75 cents per hectare.

Edgell said Pacific Logging, like other companies on private land, has greater flexibility in balancing log supplies with market demands.

BUT ON CROWN land tenures, the cut is regulated by the Forest Service. Generally, a licensee must harvest within 50 per cent of the annual allowable cut and within 10 per cent in each five years.

"This imposes some limitations on the licensee's ability to respond to short-term economic fluctuations that determine the demand for wood products, and therefore influence the economicaly optimum rate of log harvesting."

Saanich brief calls for tanker traffic safeguards

Saanich is not opposed to an increase in the amount of oil traffic entering Juan de fuca Strait, providing there are adequate safeguards.

A brief prepared by Saanich emergency measures coordinator Jack Bush, containing the proposed safeguards, will be presented to council Monday and, if approved, will be submitted at the National Energy Board's oil port hearings in Vancouver next month.

Safeguards proposed:

- The federal government underwrite cost of an oil spill cleanup in Canadian waters or upon adjacent Canadian lands.
- Oil tankers operating in Canadian waters comply with acceptable Canadian standards before they are licensed.
- No port site be considered unless it is acceptable to a majority of residents living in the area selected.
- Size limits be placed on vessels operating in Canadian waters, especially those carrying cargoes detrimental to the environment.
- Provision of up-to-date control bases and qualified pilots to aid and monitor ships manoeuvering in difficult areas.

The board is considering a proposal to build a tanker off-loading station at Low Point, 29 kilometres west of Port Angeles, about directly south of Sooke.

Saanich, the brief says, does not have an economically or physically suited site for an oil port and is therefore unlikely to be directly affected by any local development. However, the Port Angeles area is only 38 kilometres away. Also, the municipality has a coastline of about 16 kilometres on Haro Strait. "The Haro Straits are a northern extension of the Juan de Fuca Straits and this area is of immediate concern."

Suggestions contained in the brief are aimed at minimizing the chances of an oil spill accident at new ports and the coastal waterway.

Former provincial Liberal leader David Anderson, who last week chastized Capital Region District municipal leaders for not attending the hearings, warned that the oil port proposal was a threat not only to Victoria but to the whole of Vancouver Island.

The Island's multi-million-dollar tourist industry would disappear overnight if there was an oil spill, he said.

Block faces grilling on slush fund claim

By BILL SMITH
Colonist reporter

Saanich Ald. Irene Block should substantiate allegations about the existence of a municipal election slush fund or resign, veteran Ald. Sandy Noel said Saturday.

He said he would challenge Block on statements she made Friday, and would demand her resignation if she did not name names.

The serious charges made by Block placed all members of Saanich council under suspicion, the veteran council member said.

"I will be challenging her in the council chamber Monday to produce evidence to support these serious allegations. If she can't prove what she said, then she should resign; that's the honorable thing to do."

Block said during a panel discussion at University of Victoria there were people on Saanich council who are "tools of big business."

She accused some Saanich aldermen of dishonesty and corruption, claiming they receive financial support in return for their votes on key issues.

Block
. . . 'I won't be resigning'

"It is well-known that a slush fund exists to aid Saanich candidates who will vote for rezoning or other changes that will bring profit to the donors," she told the conference.

But she refused to name any aldermen or aldermanic candidates who might have been given money from such a fund.

Block said in an interview Saturday there was no reason to resign "and I won't be resigning."

It was not just a question of people receiving money, she added. People receive goods and services—payment for campaign advertising, signs, brochures—no money had to change hands.

Block said she was annoyed statements to the conference were "taken out of context."

She said other than her remarks, the seminar "got hardly any mention, even the keynote speaker's comments were not reported. I feel this is a terrible insult to the seminar."

Block added that it was up to citizens to go to all-candidate meetings and ask penetrating questions, "including where their financial support comes from."

Ald. David Paterson, one of the four whose term expires in November, saw Block's statements as "a scare tactic designed to destroy credibility of candidates."

He agreed with Noel that "she should put up or shut up," and termed the allegations "ludicrous."

Paterson, who is not seeking re-election, said the charges must be substantiated because "we've all been tainted."

He said Block should be asked to retract if she was unwilling to provide additional information.

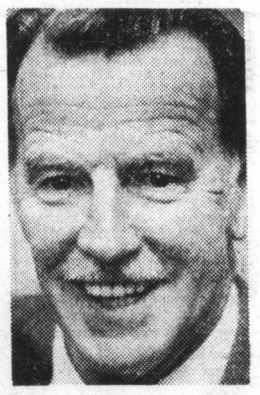
Paterson said he was not one of the aldermen who had been invited by Block to talk on a one-on-one basis over a few drinks.

"This I find most distateful," he said.

He said if he had been seeking re-election he would have been "greatly disturbed" by Block's remarks because she used the word "corruption."

Mayor Mel Couvelier said he had no knowledge of a slush fund, "but on the other hand it is a basic part of our system that candidates receive contributions from supporters."

The only way to halt such a practice would be passage of an elections disclosure bylaw, he said. "And if I'm re-elected, we'll bring back the one that was narrowly defeated last month."



Noel
. . . he'll raise questions

Board promotes five sergeants

Five Saanich police sergeants have been promoted to staff-sergeants effective Nov. 1 as part of a major reorganization of the force, police board chairman Mel Couvelier said Saturday.

Promoted are Carl Bolger, William Bryant, William Chisholm, David McGregor and William Nixon.

The reorganization, being carried out to cope with an increase in youth-related crime, will see the seven-member community services division doubled in size and raised to full division status under 24-year veteran Inspector Ted Owen.

Ten youth workers are to be hired to work alongside police in the schools and neighborhoods.

Council acclamation likely in Esquimalt

Esquimalt voters may not have a ballot to mark in the Nov. 17 municipal election, at least not for council members, unless last-minute candidates file their nomination papers before the noon deadline Monday.

Acclamations in both the aldermanic and mayoralty races seem likely, returning officer George Merz said Saturday. (Elections for school board trustees would still take place.)

Although voters may miss the municipal ballot box, taxpayers could save "several thousand dollars" in election expenses, Merz estimated.

Ald. Ken Hill is the only candidate who has officially shown interest in succeeding retiring mayor Art Young. His decision—and Ald. Conrad Lundgren's retirement after six years—leave spaces for at least two new faces on council.

The other incumbent, Ald. Colin Blair has filed his nomination papers along with two Admirals Road residents, Victoria May Gains and Robert Jones.

Mayor Young expressed some concern Saturday over the possible lack of an election, but said it could mean that people were satisfied with the way the municipality was run.

"I think people generally run against something rather than for it," he said.

Tories eye double force in Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party hopes to become a political force in Quebec—at both the provincial and federal levels, party spokesmen confirmed Monday.

Gerald Scott told a news conference that a party convention will be held in Quebec City Nov. 30-Dec. 2 under the theme: Un Choix a Batir (A Choice to Build).

Scott, defeated Tory candidate in Quebec's Shefford riding in the last election, will be chairman of the three-day meeting which will mark the start of a campaign to attract the "greatest possible number of Quebecers."

The Conservative party was "the choice of Canadians" in the May 22 election, but "unfortunately it was not the choice of the majority of Quebecers," he said.

Scott said formation of a provincial branch of the Progressive Conservatives would also be discussed at the Quebec City meeting, but concrete action would be "unthinkable before the referendum."

IN A TELEPHONE interview from Ottawa, a spokesman for Senator Lowell Murray, architect of Prime Minister Clark's victory, said that Murray met privately in Quebec City Sunday with Rodrigue Biron, leader of Quebec's Union Nationale.

"Senator Murray's desire for a provincial Progressive Conservative party," was discussed by the two men, the spokesman said.

Last week, Biron announced that his flagging Union Nationale would disband to make way for a new party, uniting all right-wing forces in Quebec. But the move would only come after next spring's referendum to decide Quebec's future ties with Canada.

AFTER THE announcement, Maurice Bellemare, house leader of the Union Nationale, charged that Biron was breaking up the party to allow the the Conservatives to move into Quebec.

Bellemare said from his Acton Vale, Que., office Monday that he would attend a special party meeting in Quebec City Nov. 24 where the Biron proposal would be discussed. After that, he would either quit the national assembly or sit as an independent Union Nationale member.

"The Conservatives are going to pack the meeting and vote to dissolve the Union Nationale," he predicted. "Biron has stabbed me in the back."

Spokesmen for both the Union Nationale and the Conservatives insisted that it is just a coincidence that they are meeting one week apart in Quebec City.

ALTHOUGH THE Union Nationale has debts of $130,000, this was not a factor in Biron's decision, the party treasurer said.

The two banks involved have not called the loans, Leopold Fournier said. But it is hurting the Union Nationale's annual financing campaign which began two weeks ago, he complained.

Scott said the sovereignty-association referendum would only be discussed briefly at the Conservative meeting.

During the weekend, Clark said he would not campaign in the referendum because he is not a Quebecer, but urged Quebec Conservatives to rally behind Quebec Liberal Leader Claude Ryan, who will lead pro-federalist forces in the fight.

DESPITE THE appeal from Clark, Roch LaSalle—his Quebec lieutenant—told the Montreal news conference he was opposed to participation in the "No" committee.

Mini-cops urged in race study

TORONTO (CP) — Height and weight requirements for Metropolitan Toronto Police officers should be relaxed to prevent discrimination against certain minority groups, says Gerald Emmett Cardinal Carter.

That was one of the suggestions in the Roman Catholic cardinal's report Monday to Metropolitan Toronto council after a seven-week investigation into minority-group allegations of unfair treatment by police.

He also called for creation of a committee to act as a liaison between the police commission and visible minorities.

Carter was appointed mediator in the dispute between police and minority groups on Sept. 6 after allegations of racism increased following the death of Albert Johnson, a Jamaican immigrant shot by police in his home last August.

Two officers have been charged with manslaughter in the shooting.

Strict adherence to physical requirements in recruiting officers "is only a sign that indeed the doors are being closed upon some of our minority groups," Carter said in his report.

"I do not feel that a police officer needs to have the physical size that was once required in view of the kind of work which can be done at the present moment."

A short or slightly-built candidate for police work may be able to compensate his lack of size in other ways, the cardinal said.

He also called for more education of police officers in dealing with minorities.

"As I listen to some of the distinguished representatives of visible minorities, I could not help thinking that they might well be invited to address the police candidates on the nature and the problems of their community and upon minorities in general."

Concluding that "racism exists in Toronto beyond a doubt," Carter said verbal taunts by police officers against minority groups were prevalent.

Although allegations of name-calling are hard to prove, he said, people should be encouraged to file complaints so that incidents would not go unchecked.

Metro Chairman Paul Godfrey called the cardinal's report a masterpiece and said he would recommend the setting up of a liaison committee and the development of foot patrols by police. He did not comment on the recommendation to relax height and weight requirements.

Carter suggested having more foot patrols, saying they "establish personal and visible links with ethnic communities."

He disagreed with the proposal that Metro council replace the province in appointing the majority of the five-member police commission.

Carter said he talked to many people who felt there was no suitable mechanism for filing complaints or having a fair hearing.

Ontario Solicitor-General Roy McMurtry has announced plans to create a civilian board to review complaints against Metro police.

Alberta may peg oil at world price

VANCOUVER (CP) — If the federal and Alberta governments are unable to reach a new oil price agreement this winter, Alberta will set its own price for in-province consumption, Premier Peter Lougheed says.

He said Monday that if other provinces wanted oil at that price, they could buy it or go elsewhere.

"Within Alberta, people will pay the world price for oil fairly soon, and if other Canadians want to pay the price, they can have some, too," he said following an address to the Vancouver Board of Trade.

Lougheed said he doubted the federal government would move before Alberta and use its discretionary powers to set the price of oil for sale outside the province.

He said at a time when Ottawa was trying to soldify the federalist forces in Quebec by promising not to touch Quebec Hydro or other natural resources, it was not likely to encroach on another province's jurisdiction over resources.

"I wouldn't go so far as to say it (a unilateral decision by Ottawa) would lead to a breakup of Confederation, but it would create some stresses and strains," he said.

There was always the chance that Ottawa would challenge Alberta's unilateral decision to set its oil prices, he said, but that would be unreasonable interference in a province's power to decide when and how it wanted to develop its resources for sale.

The provinces own their resources and can determine when they develop them, but they need federal permission to market them outside provincial boundaries.

At this winter's price negotiations, Alberta will continue to press its position that domestic oil should be raised to world prices.

Canadian oil sells domestically for $13.75 a barrel, while the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said in June its ceiling for a barrel would be $29.37.

Alberta is willing to make concessions, Lougheed said, such as phasing in the in-

Oil threat 'grandstanding'

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed is "grandstanding" in threatening that his province will set its own oil prices, says Opposition Leader Bob Clark.

New Democratic Leader Grant Notley said the statement meant Alberta was "headed for a major confrontation" with a federal government that would have all the other provinces on its side.

Pricing oil at world levels would destroy economic diversification in Alberta and be "catastrophic for Alberta farmers and for the Canadian economy as a whole."

Clark said he doubted the seriousness of Lougheed's intention to raise prices that high, but said he did not think Albertans should have to pay the world price for oil, adding, "It's our resource. We own it."

Can't hack it any longer

Days of summer have given way to days of turning leaves and disappearing tourists. If hack driver Dan Feehan finds lack of business disturbing, his 17-year-old horse Danny Boy doesn't seem to miss endless trots around park. Tomorrow is their last day on city streets for season. Danny Boy goes to Salt Spring Island for winter, and Feehan, an unemployed teacher, goes to Edmonton.

Embassy stays in Tel Aviv until peace pact —Clark

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative government has dropped its proposal to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv.

"We do not intend to move the embassy to Jerusalem," Prime Minister Clark told the Commons on Monday.

In reversing one of the most controversial decisions he had taken since becoming prime minister after the May 22 federal election, he said that when there was a just and lasting peace in the Middle East, his government might re-open the question.

Clark was following up the recommendation of Robert Stanfield, former Conservative party leader, who toured the Middle East studying reaction to the government's intent.

Arab countries had objected vehemently, and Canadian officials have admitted considerable loss of business. The Israeli government supported the move.

Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau said Clark had blundered and cost Canada both business and credibility.

He added that one Arab told him that Stanfield had said during his Middle East tour: "Don't worry. We will change the policy, but also we will change the prime minister pretty soon."

Stanfield later described Trudeau's remarks as mischievous.

"You don't believe I'd say that, do you?" he asked reporters. "There's just no truth to it."

Answering questions at a news conference, the former Conservative leader said he decided to make his recommendation now because it became very clear during his travels in the Middle East that moving the embassy could jeopardize peace efforts.

Stanfield stressed that his recommendation was based primarily on peace considerations rather than commercial interests.

Canada had important economic interests in the Middle East, but the most important interest was peace, he said.

"It's on this basis I made my recommendation."

Egyptian ambassador Hassan Fahmy said he was "happy and satisfied with this decision of the Canadian government."

Abdullah Abdullah, head of the Palestine section of the Arab Information Centre here, said it was a courageous decision, but Canada should go further and recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization and Palestine Liberation rights.

Trudeau also said that Stanfield had given de facto Canadian recognition to the Palestine Liberation Organization by talking to its representatives while in the Middle East.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, said the Conservatives were irresponsible in proposing the embassy move in the May 22 election campaign and irresponsible in announcing implementation of the move after the election.

And Immigration Minister Ron Atkey, the man given most of the responsibilty for Clark deciding to move the embassy, said he was in favor of any move designed to help peace in the Middle East. He said he hoped the Jewish community would

Decision applauded by Arabs, not Israel

OTTAWA (CP) — The Israeli embassy said Monday that Prime Minister Clark's latest move on the Jerusalem embassy issue would not help bring peace in the Middle East.

But Egyptian Ambassador Hassan Fahmy said he was "happy and satisfied" with Clark's decision not to move the embassy.

Israeli Ambassador Yeshayahu Anug said Clark's announcement "causes disappointment."

Linking the embassy move "with the ultimate outcome of the peace process isn't helpful to the peace process itself," Anug said.

It would not help peace "since it may be interpreted as acceptance of the obstructionist and negative view of the Arab rejectionist states regarding that process," he said.

The rejectionist states are the Arab states who have denounced Israeli-Egyptian peace talks.

"Peacemaking needs continuous support, and those who oppose it deserve no reward," the ambassador said.

"Jerusalem will remain the capital of Israel and the united city of peace in which religions and peoples live together," he added.

Fahmy said he was glad Clark dropped the Jerusalem move quickly, because if the problem had festered "the situation would have been more difficult to solve."

Abdullah said Clark's move had "removed the scar in Canadian-Arab relations" caused by Clark's original embassy plan.

Roads run bloody in San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — A leftist march exploded into a bloody gunbattle with police Monday that left dozens dead and wounded in streets resembling a battlefield. The moderate ruling junta cordoned off the heart of the capital with armored vehicles, but a wave of looting broke out after the five-hour battle.

Reporters trapped inside the area said leftists, most of them armed with pistols, attacked the National Palace and the mayor's office, burned several cars and set up barricades with garbage cans. Police fired back with machine guns from armored vehicles.

Officials at Rosales Hospital said its ambulance crews picked up or saw the bodies of at least 37 people killed and that it was treating 35 wounded. Unconfirmed reports said as many as 100 were wounded.

A wave of looting broke out after the battle ended at nightfall, with persons believed to be common criminals breaking windows and knocking down doors along a five-block row of shops around the central July 14 plaza, witnesses said.

The Popular Revolutionary Bloc announced it would free most of the 250 hostages it took Wednesday at the labor and economy ministries on Monday evening, but would keep three cabinet members as well as the buildings.

Witnesses said the fire-fight was triggered by 300 young members of the leftist Feb. 28 Popular Leagues who opened fire on policemen during a march. Earlier, authorities had identified them as members of the Bloc.

Win the Island win off until next week

There won't be any winner of game four of the Colonist name the mountains and Win The Island contest, published Sunday.

An error in the entry form —omission of a seventh circle in the Mystery Island portion of the quiz—unfortunately nullified the chance of anyone winning.

So game four, with apologies to confused contestants, will be cancelled and the contest extended another week with a new puzzle in next Sunday's edition of the paper.

Resources bulge surplus

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist business editor

VANCOUVER — B.C.'s forests, its oil and natural gas and its stature as a vacation destination have come through once more.

Figures disclosed here Monday by the province's finance minister showed that natural resources and tourism were major reasons why B.C. continues to show a healthy budgetary surplus, quarter after quarter.

Strong consumer spending and difficulties with the science of budget forecasting also contributed to the $188.6-million surplus shown by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe. The latest figures are for the six-month period from April 1 to Sept. 30.

Revenue for the period in question was $2.49 billion, $217.4 million more than was predicted. Expenditure was $2.3 billion, $54.9 million more than expected.

Wolfe, in making his first quarterly report outside the Legislative Buildings, said he expected to see the surplus whittled somewhat when the nine-months mark was passed, but he quickly added that the government was now fully confident that a balanced budget was assured for the full fiscal year.

The Sept. 30 surplus was $162.5 million more than forecast and $74.2 million more than the surplus at the same time in 1978. Wolfe said the continuing strong housing starts figure in the U.S., which absorbs the majority of B.C.'s lumber exports, was just one reason why his estimates were so far out.

"U.S. housing starts are holding at a remarkable level, especially considering the anticipated recession there. This is at a level that was impossible to anticipate," Wolfe said.

Other things contributed strongly to the performance of the forestry sector, the minister said. Constant employment throughout the industry without serious disruption through walkouts or strikes, the value of the Canadian dollar vis-a-vis the U.S. dollar (export sales are in that coin) and strong prices and increased deliveries of pulp, paper and lumber, could all share the credit, he said.

Timber sales, logging tax and other forest fees totalled $210 million, which was more than a 100-per-cent jump over last year's six-month

Heritage fund? No plans here

VANCOUVER (Staff) — This province has no plans to create a B.C. Heritage Fund like the headline-grabber in neighboring Alberta.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said in an interview here Monday that the concept had been "looked at," but nothing was being done to create such a fund. Alberta has amassed some $5 billion in oil and gas revenues and is setting it aside for the time when its vast petroleum resources dwindle.

In response to a reporter who asked him to justify the fact of repeating surpluses, Wolfe shot back:

"No we don't apologize for surpluses in British Columbia. For four years we've been functioning on a balanced-budget policy, not to be following that religiously, but to tread with care in terms of estimates.

"You should bear in mind that any surpluses we've recorded in prior years have been appropriated to stimulate employment, extending highways and increasing the homeowner grant. This (money) is not hidden away in some vault."

Sexes may share Oak Bay council

When voters in Oak Bay municipality go to the polls Nov. 17, they may well end up electing Canada's first council evenly split between the sexes.

There is a good possibility that three of the six aldermanic seats on council will be held by women after the vote, although the mayor's chair will, for this term, be a male preserve.

Three women are among the four candidates for the two one-year seats on council, and incumbent Ald. Isabel Craig is expected to be re-elected on her record. The other woman alderman in Oak Bay, Shirley Dowell, is not facing election this year.

In addition to the five vacant aldermanic seats, Oak Bay's 12,400 voters will have to choose a new mayor to replace poll-topping Brian Smith, who has moved to the provincial scene.

● Full list of nominations, Page 42, 43.

The two-way race for mayor pits former alderman John Goult against veteran alderman Doug Watts for the top job.

Goult, an Oak Bay lawyer, retired undefeated last year after four two-year terms. Watts, a senior engineer with the provincial water resources branch, has been on council continuously since the late 1950s, except for one term when he unsuccessfully ran for reeve.

Watts' run for the mayoralty, combined with the resignation of Ald. Norman Pimlott two months ago, left two one-year terms open.

Seeking the job are former school board chairman Susan Brice, Margaret Marston, homemaker and long-time council watchdog as a delegate of the League of Women Voters, Mabelle Murphy, co-ordinator of the Oak Bay senior citizens' centre, and chartered accountant Walter Holms.

Three incumbent aldermen—contractor and former school trustee Peter Bunn, political science professor Neil Swainson and homemaker Isabel Craig—are all seeking re-election to two-year terms.

They will be opposed by three others: Walter Dodsworth, former manager of the Butchart Gardens, who served on council from 1961 to 1969, when he was defeated in a mayoralty bid by Frances Elford; travel agent Henry William Smith, and retired businessman Jack Rhodes.
